PERRY GARDENS, RAVENNA, O.

POMMERT'S "PURITY."

This is the new commercial white that created a sensation at the Washington, D. C., convention of the S. A. F., was given a first class certificate and was presented to President Harding by the ladies of the S. A. F. with an appropriate speech dedicating it to the memory of his mother.

It is a pure white when cut in bud and opened in water; flower is size and form of America but has more substance making it the best shipper and keeper we have ever grown.

Strong healthy grower in the field and greenhouse; an ideal forcing variety but two weeks later than Lilywhite; an all season kind. You will have to have it eventually—Why not now? The best money-maker of all in the cut flower market. Be sure to get the right one "Pom-mert's." Our soil produces the best bulbs to be had.

The Market.

Chrysanthemums and pompons hold the sway of the market. Mum stock this season is good, with extra fine blooms and good foliage. Fair prices are being realized for the greater part of the stock. Extra fine yellow and white Turners are on the market and bring fancy prices. Bonnaffons are reaching us in good supply and sell well. Chieftains run a close second. Carnations are plentiful and move well, ranging in price from $3 to $5 per hundred. Violets are improving, but there is no big demand for them. There is a good supply of roses reaching us daily, and the demand for them is quite good. Pilgrim, Premier, Butterfly and Columbia are good sellers, as also is Ward. American Beauty is not in good demand. Orchids are plentiful and have a fair demand. Valley is not in heavy supply, but practically meets all requirements. There is some call for calendulas, the quality of which is good. Asparagus plumosus, maidenhair, fancy ferns, coontie leaves and leucothoe, galax and Mexican ivy are in good supply. Extra demand has been noticed on Boston ferns, palms, etc. Boxwood is selling well and the quality is good.

Various Notes.

Max the Florist reports excellent business for last week, it having been particularly heavy with funeral work.

The force in the supply department of George B. Hart has been working considerable overtime for the last month, in order to get out an unusual

Charles Suhr has some excellent pot-grown Boston ferns, which are selling well at this time. Their chrysanthemums this season are especially fine and are selling readily.

An unusually good display of chrysanthemums and pompons, included in which are many of the rarest novelties, as well as the popular White and Yellow Turners, have been on display at the Lamberton memorial conservatories, in Highland park. This display, as well as a similar but smaller one at the offices of the Rochester park department, is staged each year at this time.

GREENHOUSES

THE SURE WAY TO BIGGER PROFIT

When a florist places his order for a King you can be sure that he, like hundreds of other King owners, is on the right track for bigger profit.

King greenhouses grow a larger percentage of firsts than other makes of houses and they cost less to operate. One grower tells us that his King greenhouses go a long way in producing the high-grade stock he is sending out. Another florist says that the amount of coal used during a severe winter was less than we said it would be in an ordinary winter.

The quality of material and workmanship is the best and can be translated into one word—strength. A grower wrote us saying that in a severe sleet storm “we had considerable ice and snow on the houses, but your construction stood the strain with no bad results whatever.”

As for price and service read what this grower writes: “After comparing all propositions in regard to workmanship, service, details of construction and price, we were firmly convinced that your proposition was by far the best we had received and so placed the order with you.”

When you think of good greenhouses, think of KING.

Horse Sense Talk

Number One

Horse sense, as we understand it, is the kind of sense that makes you use everyday common sense in whatever you do.

Take building a new house, or enlarging an old one, for example:

All too few there are, who give it the careful care and thoughtful consideration it deserves. When you begin asking folks questions, why it's so; in nine cases out of ten, they say it's because a man generally decides too quickly to build.

He puts off deciding to build until along in the early Spring.

To then get a house up and a crop in for Fall, he has to step so lively, he steps right over some of the things he might better have stepped on. He just doesn't give himself time to plan carefully.

Plan not only for the house he's going to put up, but for everything in relation to it, whether it be his existing houses or the ones he will put up in years to come.

Lots of money is wasted because of hasty planning.

It's really a crime how much is actually thrown away.

That's why we are going to urge you, from now on, to start right in planning.

Don't hesitate to call on us for suggestions. Whether you are thinking of giving us the order or not, our services won't cost you a dollar.

If you give the order to the other fellow, we have helped the greenhouse business in general if we have helped you.

Every well planned range or house that goes up, makes the florist business just that much better for your business and for ours. Anything that betters the business, betters things for all of us.

For the next few weeks we won't be so busy selling.

That means we will have plenty of time to sit down with you and talk and plan unhurriedly. We have some facts and figures, that have to do with making more money out of a greenhouse. It's the boiled down experiences of the leading growers all over the country.

If you were to travel for a month, calling on the very same men, you couldn't get the same facts. But we will give you the benefit of them without charge.

Start planning, that's the thing to do!
Start doing it now!

SWEET PEA SEED

Early or Winter-Flowering Orchids or Spencers

THE IDEAL CROP TO FOLLOW CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Our Florist's Strains of Sweet Peas are thoroughly rogued in the field, seed being hand picked and true to name—an important consideration when comparing prices. A.B.C. "Supreme Quality" Early Flowering Varieties are planted by growers who appreciate the ultimate in results.

We mention below up-to-the-minute varieties that are making good in the various markets of this country this season. You will make no mistake, we believe, in planting them. However, our complete list of some 50 additional varieties will be mailed free for the asking.

The Queen of Early-Flowering Orchid Sweet Peas ZVOLANEK'S ROSE

Selected True Strain

This is the very best commercial variety to date. Everyone who has tried it wants it again in larger quantities. Beautiful self-rose color, double size of Mrs. Skach. Holds its color to the last and is free bloomer.

Per oz., $1.50; ¼ lb., $4.00; 1 lb., $15.00.

BLUEBIRD—This is a charming shade of blue, somewhat similar to Wedgwood, but more of a true self, especially as the flower ages. The flowers are arranged on long stems—much the best of all blue sorts.

Per oz., 75c; ¼ lb., $2.50; 1 lb., $8.00.

BALL'S COLUMBIA—Color pink and white. Very early and one of the best florist varieties, like Xmas White and pink.

Per oz., $1.25; ¼ lb., $4.00; 1 lb., $15.00.

EARLY GRENADIER (Novelty). This is the most brilliant Sweet Pea yet introduced. A truly early, everblooming type, of robust habit. The color may best be described as a glowing poppy scarlet.

Per oz., $2.00; per ¼ lb., $6.00.

IMPROVED SNOWSTORM—This is by far the finest of all white Winter flowering varieties. The flowers are extra large, of fine form with a magnificent and boldly waved standard, a vigorous grower with enormous flowers which are invariably borne in fours on very long stems.

Per oz., 75c; ¼ lb., $2.50; 1 lb., $8.00.

MRS. KERR (Novelty). The first early flowering salmon. Created a sensation when exhibited at the great International Flower Show in New York, March, 1921; also at the National Flower Show, Indianapolis, Ind., 1922.

Per oz., $2.00; ¼ lb., $6.00.

GLITTERS—A variety which is unique in itself; the color is a bright fiery orange salmon. The flowers are of enormous size, are beautifully waved, usually borne four to the stem. As a cut flower variety it is without a peer.

Per oz., $1.25; ¼ lb., $4.00; 1 lb., $15.00.

HARMONY—An exceptionally choice clear lavender, very large flower.

Per oz., 85c; ¼ lb., $3.00; 1 lb., $10.00.

LAVENDER KING—Color rich, true, deep lavender; flowers are of large size, and beautifully waved form; extra fine. Don't fail to include this variety in your list.

Per oz., 75c; ¼ lb., $2.50; 1 lb., $8.00.

PRINCESS—A vigorous grower, with large flowers, fluted and waved. Color a lovely shade of soft lavender suffused mauve.

Per oz., 75c; ¼ lb., $2.50; 1 lb., $8.00.

HEATHERBELL—Color rich but pleasing mauve, turning to a beautiful mauve lavender when cut and put in water.

Per oz., 75c; ¼ lb., $2.50; 1 lb., $8.00.

EMPRESS—Very fine. Bright deep rose pink.

Per oz., 85c; ¼ lb., $3.00; 1 lb., $10.00.

ROSE QUEEN—One of the choicest varieties. The flowers are borne on long stems, are of large size and free bloomers. Usually four flowers are produced on a stem. Color a most attractive shade of pink.

Per oz., 85c; ¼ lb., $3.00; 1 lb., $10.00.

GLOEKLER FLOWER REFRIGERATORS

Gloekler Fixtures in Store of A. W. Smith Co., Pittsburgh.

THE essential part of the preservation of cut flowers is a cold, dry circulation of air. That is the fundamental principle of Gloekler Flower Refrigerators. It keeps the refrigerator sweet, clean and sanitary, and at the same time results in a saving of ice consumption. It requires perfect insulation to produce this condition, and the Gloekler method of reinforced cork insulation has been proven by test the only practical way of producing such results.

And then, the selling quality of the refrigerator—that is a big point for consideration. These refrigerators display flowers so attractively that they almost sell themselves. They are as valuable as an extra salesman in your store. They present an insistent argument to the customer to buy, but in an unobjectionable way. And, after all, the first aim of the florist is to sell.

Gloekler Refrigerators are made of selected materials, finished to exactly harmonize with your store interior, and completed with our own heavy, attractive hardware.

Many splendid styles and sizes in stock for quick shipment. We build any size or style to order. Any finish.

A NEW CATALOGUE of FLORISTS' REFRIGERATORS shows flower store interiors in full color. Send for your copy. It's free and it's worth while. Write TODAY.

You Who Look For Something Better!

Commonwealth is better than existing roses. Montgomery's dark pink seedling will please you. We have confidence in Commonwealth and have shown our faith by placing plants of this new rose with the following firms for trial. These men have our full permission to tell the truth. We have not asked them to be charitable as regards any faults that the rose may have. We have placed the rose with these growers that the story of Commonwealth may be the story of honest endeavor to give the rose growers of America something better than we have had before. See Commonwealth with your nearest neighbor; or, better still, come to Cromwell and see it here. These men are growing it:

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

WHAT PENN PAYS FOR PUBLICITY

What he shall invest in advertising and how he shall invest it are problems that perpetually perplex every retail florist. The notable success in this department of our business of Henry Penn, of Boston, makes his example and his views on the subject of much value to the rest of us.

APPORTIONMENT of the amount set aside for the year's advertising among the different forms of publicity at a florist's disposal depends upon the particular locality and location of each individual. Sometimes, for example, a florist will prefer to pay $5,000 in rent and $2,000 for advertising, rather than move to a side street where his rent bill would total only $2,000 and pay $5,000 in advertising. Another florist may prefer to do the reverse. Whether one is on Main street or around the corner, or out in a residence district, has a material bearing upon the amount of transient business that is done and consequently upon the amount of money which must be spent to bring in other kinds of trade.

Dividing the Appropriation.

But, aside from the matter of rent, there remains always the question how to divide the sum one has set aside for advertising among the various media competing for its disposal. A Pittsburgh firm of large size and high standing, for instance, does no newspaper advertising; its money is spent for car cards and largely for direct-mail advertising. On the other hand, Penn the Florist, of Boston, spends practically two-thirds of the advertising appropriation in the daily newspapers. The biggest advertising expense of one large florist in the metropolis of New York is for window displays and direct-mail advertising. An equally successful florist, not many blocks away, spends the greater proportion of the amount he pays out for publicity in the city dailies. The largest firm at our national capital not only pays a large rent bill and spends much money in elaborate window displays, but also carries a few lines in each of the daily papers throughout the year and goes in for larger space occasionally, even to the extent, not long ago, of two pages in the rotogravure section of the Sunday newspaper, probably as expensive a single advertisement as any florist in the country has run.

Persistence Needed.

Henry Penn, of Boston, has won fame not only as the chairman of the national publicity campaign of the Society of American Florists, but also, and even more emphatically, as the director of his own local publicity campaign, in which, it is no secret, he has invested a larger sum each year than has the whole trade in its national campaign. The figures at the top of this page, taken from the firm's auditor's sheet of monthly bills covering the past year, bear witness to this assertion. It should be stated, too, that this budget is nothing special. As a writer on this subject recently said, "too often a firm makes up its mind to spend $5,000 on a big bang of an advertisement. It does so. There is a sudden loud noise and then—dead silence. Nothing much has happened." On the contrary, the noise which Mr. Penn creates in the Hub is a continuous bombardment throughout the year, and year after year, to which his fellow citizens must harken and, judging from the size of the business done by this firm, have done so.

Henry Penn believes in being emphatic. "Florists, as a rule," he says, "are not emphatic enough in the thoughts they want to convey. For instance, we all know that hundreds of thousands of people are celebrating a birthday every day in the year, but the public must be reminded, and continually reminded, in order to bring orders for birthday flowers." In order so to remind the public, Penn the Florist advertises birthday flowers in the newspapers. The firm features them on car cards. Birthday baskets occupy the store windows. And painted signboards such as that pictured at the bottom of this page enforce the other advertising done along this line.

Penn's Policy.

Asked regarding the apportionment of the advertising appropriation among the various forms to be used, Mr. Penn said, "It depends much on local con-

For instance, we all know that hundreds of thousands of people are celebrating a birthday every day in the year, but the public must be reminded, and continually reminded, in order to bring orders for birthday flowers." In order so to remind the public, Penn the Florist advertises birthday flowers in the newspapers. The firm features them on car cards. Birthday baskets occupy the store windows. And painted signboards such as that pictured at the bottom of this page enforce the other advertising done along this line.

Penn's Policy.

Asked regarding the apportionment of the advertising appropriation among the various forms to be used, Mr. Penn said, "It depends much on local conditions. Many florists lay a great deal of stress on newspapers, more on direct-mail advertising, while others make large use of car cards and signboards, all of which have their importance." In explanation of the policy of his own firm, Mr. Penn said:

"Being believers in continuous advertising, we have certain advertisements running every day in the year, including Sundays and holidays, in several papers, and their positions in the various newspapers have become a fixture. Next in importance in our newspaper advertising is our weekly special feature advertisement, at all times with a cut representing the commodity we wish to advertise. Some of these bear prices; others are merely general publicity advertisements. We run these in several newspapers during the week, but vary the days in which they appear, believing thereby we get greater circulation than we do by running the same advertisement in several papers the same day. This is quite an important suggestion and helps materially in getting greater results.

Cumulative Effect.

"We have for over fifteen years, without a day's interruption, had our lithographed cards running in the cars of Boston and greater Boston. We have had also painted signboards on highways near the street car routes on which our cards are run, giving us an unusual cumulative value. For instance, a patron may see our advertisement in the newspaper; then, when entering the street car, look up and see a Penn car card, and, while unconsciously looking out of the car window, gaze upon a Penn hand-painted signboard. This succession is surely cumulative, to say the least, and the effect, resultful.

"The returns from advertising in this manner are decidedly strong, as the contact is threefold, and our faith is stronger than ever towards its continuance.

"Direct-mail advertising has been growing in importance, and while we have not put the energy into it in the past that we should have, we are going to increase our appropriation a great deal this year, in order to give it a better trial. In fact, we have doubled our direct-mail appropriation for the coming year, feeling that there is a decided improvement in the copy and the quality of many kinds of advertising provided by service companies in the florists' field which are worthy of their use as a business-getter."

COPY WITH A KICK.

To jolt the average man into proper appreciation of the uses he should make of flowers, particularly in telling his wife what he thinks of her, has been the task undertaken by the Allied Florists' Association in its campaign of advertising in the local newspapers.

"When it comes to sentiment, the average man isn't always there," says Printers' Ink, the ad men's weekly, in commenting on the New Yorkers' copy. "If some night before he started for his home in the suburbs his wife could say a few words to him, telling him how she would appreciate some flowers, his annual purchases would probably increase several hundred per cent. If he gives his wife flowers on Christmas and Easter and doesn't forget to bring some home on their wedding anniversary, he considers himself a pretty thoughtful and sentimental creature. Flowers are an incidental purchase. To sell them to the average business man requires some sort of plain talk to jolt him out of his thoughtless attitude about his wife and about the flowers that would please her."

It is for this reason, apparently, that the Allied Florists' Association of New York is using unusual copy to make stick in his mind the suggestion that the average man buy flowers for his wife or sweetheart. The copy used in several metropolitan newspapers minces no words in telling friend husband his plain duty concerning flowers and his wife.

"Your wife would be astonished," read one advertisement, "to see you walk in with the Woolworth building under one arm. But she would probably be even more astonished to see

Here is another home thrust: "Many a woman gets flowers from her husband at her wedding—and not again until her funeral. There is more time for her to appreciate them on ordinary occasions. Why not surprise your wife with a box tonight?" The reproduction on this page of an advertisement in the New York papers gives still another bit of copy "with a kick."

On each piece of copy the membership emblem of the association—a white rose on a background of black, with the words, "Member Allied Florists' Association"—is featured. It is the intention to have members display this sign in the window to tie up with the local advertising.

HOSTETTER'S NEW STORE.

The opening of the new flower shop of M. H. Hostetter at Manheim, Pa., which was held Saturday afternoon and evening, November 25, was a decided success, more than 400 persons having been present, which speaks most encouragingly for a borough the size of Manheim, twelve miles from Lancaster.

The store is being operated in connection with the range of Mr. Hostetter, where he grows quantities of carnations, sweet peas, chrysanthemums and other winter flowers for the wholesale trade. This new venture of supplying the needs of those nearest to the producer is a commendable one, and Mr. Hostetter has the best wishes of all in the trade.

A large aquarium filled with goldfish was one of the many novel attractions. Each person attending the show received a souvenir in the shape of a small, potted fern or primrose.

Mr. Hostetter is growing many thousands of bulbs for his Easter trade, and expects to have branch stores in several other boroughs in Lancaster county in the spring. He has added a new greenhouse of steel and concrete construction during the last season.

Phares S. Hostetter, of Manheim, Pa., grows more calla lilies than any other grower in Lancaster county. Under the treatment which he gives them, they grow most luxuriantly and produce immense quantities of blooms. Sweet peas are also well grown at this place.

E. P. Hostetter has a large range of houses devoted to his new variety of sweet pea, Mrs. E. P. Hostetter, which, for the last three years, has proved to be the foremost commercial pink sweet pea on the market, its stems being twenty-four inches long, with four blooms to a stem. A specialty this fall was Bonnaffon mums, of which many thousands of choice blooms were just right for the Thanksgiving market.

Mr. Shue, formerly employed with E. P. Hostetter, has a number of houses planted with sweet peas, carnations, yellow daisies, etc. Carnations are in fine shape here and reflect much credit on the grower.

Mills the Florist Expanding.

The Jacksonville Times-Union, in announcing the election of C. Leslie Whipp as president of Mills the Florist, Inc., to succeed the late C. D. Mills, carried announcement of further expansion planned by the company.

"Another important expansion is in line for Mills the Florist, Inc., according to an announcement by that popular company," stated the Times-Union. "At a reorganization meeting held recently, C. Leslie Whipp was elected president, and under his capable leadership the expansion policies formulated some time ago will be put into effect. Mr. Whipp is president of the Florida State Florists' Association and is recognized as an authority on all things horticultural in Florida.

"Besides the well known flower shop on West Duval street, the company maintains an extensive system of greenhouses on Eighth street, just east of Main. More greenhouses and a further extensive stock are at Evergreen Gardens, at Evergreen cemetery. Only last September a high-class seed store was opened at 36 West Duval street, a few doors east of the cut flower shop.

larly in Florida, for hardy evergreens and flowering shrubs for the beautification of home grounds, Mills the Florist, Inc., will establish a landscape headquarters in Avondale, to be known as Avondale Gardens. It will be located at the corner of Edgewood avenue and Fitch street, and a full and complete line of hardy evergreens, flowering shrubs, vines, palms and other plants used in landscape work in Florida will be carried. Avondale Gardens will be open for inspection about December 10. They will be in charge of John Clemens, well known landscape architect of Jacksonville. Mr. Clemens has designed and constructed a number of home grounds in the city and particularly in Avondale, and will have personal charge of all landscape work for Mills the Florist, Inc."

FLOWERS FOR FRANK BACON.

Many florists in Chicago had work for the funeral of Frank Bacon, the actor who made "Lightnin'" famous, and several florists had a heavy run of orders for the occasion. The sprays, wreaths and other pieces overflowed the stage of the Blackstone theater, where services were held. The friends of the old man who so recently rose to prominence were numerous in other walks of life as well as among actors. The center of the stage was given to the piece—made by W. J. Smyth—from the Actors' Equity Association, distinguishable by its bearing the initials of the organization's name. It stands behind John Emerson, president of the association, who is seated next to Judge Landis at the right of the platform. The white-haired man on the left side is John D. O'Hara, Mr. Bacon's successor in the leading role of "Lightnin'."

WASHINGTON'S "MAYOR."

Gude Leader in Civic Affairs.

"Most active man in District civic affairs, 'Bill' Gude stands in a class by himself," declared the headline that introduced the life story of William F.

Gude, head of Gude Bros. Co., Washington, D. C., in the Washington Post November 19. This was one of a series of stories about the most prominent men in Washington, planned as a stimulus to the rising generation. What better subject could the reporter have than, in his own words, "the man who would be mayor of the city if we had suffrage"?

The story is truly inspirational. It told how, the son of poor parents, William F. Gude could only attend school three months in the year until he was 10 years old. At that age he began work at the Studer greenhouses, in Anacostia, D. C., working without pay for two years for the privilege of attending school three months in the year. At 12 he received his first wages, $8 a month. At 16 he attended the Spencian Business College three nights a week after working all day in the greenhouses. When he was 21 he began business with his late brother, Adolph, August 5, 1889, with $20 in cash and three greenhouses at Anacostia, which have grown to a range of 300,000 feet of glass.

Activities and Offices.

If you do not believe Mr. Gude has had a busy life besides achieving this notable business success, glance at this summary, not a complete one, of his offices and activities:

Mr. Gude was born January 4, 1868, at Lynchburg, Va. He is the son of C. G. Adolphus and Fredericka (Knoll) Gude. He has resided in the District of Columbia since 1881. He has served on every inaugural committee since Grover Cleveland's administration, was chairman of the fiftieth anniversary encampment, Grand Army of the Republic, 1915; was vice-chairman of citizens' committee, reunion of United Confederate Veterans, 1916; had charge of preparedness parade, 1916; parade of selected service men, 1918; vice-president, Central Dispensary and Emergency hospital, Christian and Eleanor Rupert Home for Aged and Indigent People; director, Metropolitan National bank, Home Building Association, and member, Board of Trade, Chamber of Commerce (president, three terms); Rotary Club, City Club (life member), National Press Club, Old Colony Club, Florists' Club of Washington (past president and treasurer); Petworth Citizens' Association, Association of Oldest Inhabitants, Military Service Legion (honorary), American Carnation Society, American Rose Society, American Dahlia Society (honorary life member), National Association of Gardeners, Tennessee State Florists' Association (life member), Society of American Florists (past president and life member); Florists' Telegraph Delivery As-chairman, James Wilson, surely put real "pep" into the work with a trip which was enjoyed by over 100 members and their families.

William F. Gude entertained several hundred business men at a luncheon of the Washington Rotary Club at the greenhouses of Gude Bros. Co. recently. Miss Wilhelmina Gude, daughter of the host, won much applause by giving a dialect recitation.

Meeting at the store of Knoble Bros., we were treated royally. Then we went on to the store of Fred C. Witthuhn. At this store each machine was draped with an American flag, and the procession headed for Witthuhn's greenhouses. At this range a pleasant half-hour was spent, the ladies doing their best to eat ten pounds of chocolates, while the florists enjoyed cigars.

From this range the party went to the range of Prof. Milton Cutting and was given a demonstration of soil sterilizing, which was exceedingly interesting.

Then we went through the range of the Cuyahoga Greenhouse Co., so ably managed by A. R. Keyse. This range has over six acres under glass.

The establishment of the Growers' Basket Co., coöperatively owned, was then visited. This was an instructive tour and was enjoyed by all the visitors.

The party then journeyed to the new coöperatively owned Cleveland Pottery Co. L. J. Fried, the able manager, did everything possible to make our visit profitable.

Still more entertainment was ahead, however, for we were to take in the famous range of the Pioneer Vegetable Growers. In this range there are nine or ten acres under glass. Mr. Ruetnik gave us a practical demonstration of cleaning glass with oxalic acid. He also took us through his famous cooler, where there were 1,500 cases of celery stored.

It was getting dark, but we were just really starting, for we had a most elegantly prepared chicken supper at the Brooklyn Heights community house, served by the florists whose places we had visited. The ladies in charge were Mrs. F. C. Witthuhn, Miss Dunn, Mrs. Scott, Mrs. Thiessen, Mrs. Ponting, Mrs. Charles Kleyla, Miss Gates, Mrs. Hassny and Mrs. Bylonis.

A vote of thanks and three cheers were given for the feast. Short speeches were made by N. L. Ruetnik, Professor Cutting, Herman P. Knoble, James McLaughlin, A. C. Buskirk, Mr. Henshaw, Miss Getz, A. F. Felton and several others.

We then went upstairs and danced to excellent music. During the evening we were favored with songs by Lynn Rogers and Miss Ruetnik. All in all, this was one of the best trips which the members of the club ever had.

NEW STORE AT ROCHESTER.

These columns carried the report, a few issues ago, of the opening, November 4, of the Flower Shop, at 668 Clinton avenue, north, Rochester, N. Y., by Horace J. Head, well known to the trade in that city and state and in neighboring states. The two accompanying illustrations show the exterior and interior of this store.

The salesroom is artistically finished; the color scheme is light blue with white enamel woodwork, which comprises a good-sized counter, with a mirror at the back, and a wall case opposite. Willow furniture finished in blue and gold and a blue rug add to the charm of the store. Mr. Head conceived the idea of a novel lighting effect, produced by the use of shades made of parchment with blue panel designs, inverted. Blue cretonne of striking design is used as a drape in the window and lends itself admirably to use with the flowers at this season.

Horace J. Head, the proprietor, came to this country from Shefford, Bedfordshire, England, twelve years ago. Within a few days after reaching Rochester he became connected with the store of H. E. Wilson, at 88 East Main street. After completing nine years with Mr. Wilson, he entered the employ of George B. Hart as traveling salesman and held this position for three years, thus becoming well acquainted with the trade. He has been the Rochester correspondent of The Review for about ten years.

ROSES

GROUND BEDS FOR ROSES.

I should like some information on growing roses in ground beds. I saw this method in use in California and am of the opinion that it is a good one.
H. C. G.—Ia.

It is the general opinion that the raised benches are better for this culture than the ground beds, as the former method permits the bottom heat to be regulated with greater exactness, and in this way the root action of the plants is either increased or diminished at the will of the grower. In order to make a good ground bed for roses, it is necessary to dig down two or three feet in the soil, if the soil is of a heavy clay texture, and remove the subsoil, replacing it with a foot or so of cinders or gravel, in order to provide the drainage required by roses. This is not necessary if the soil is naturally of a gravelly consistency. In the subsoil under the cinder drainage, a tile drainage should be laid crosswise about every 100 feet, in order to carry off the water from the cinders. Then tiles running lengthwise under each bed should also be provided and empty into the larger crosswise tiles. The sides of the beds are made of concrete of a thickness of about two and one-half inches.

The soil for rose culture should have a clay body, but it should also have enough friable ingredients to pulverize readily. Heavy clay turf makes an excellent soil for rose culture. Successive layers of heavy clay turf and cow manure will make an excellent soil for the roses.

BLACK-SPOT ON ROSES.

What is the cause of black-spot on roses and how should a person proceed to cure this disease? I have 12,000 plants of Premier, Butterfly and Columbia, and the plants are from 5 to 6 months old. There are six benches of the Columbia in one section of the range which are the most seriously infected with the disease. I had the soil and water analyzed. The soil was found to be a little too heavy and the water contained too much lime.

A. P.—W. Va.

Black-spot is caused by a fungus which exists over winter on the dead leaves and spreads in the spring. The rose plants which are once affected can rarely be saved; therefore, the cure lies in prevention. It may seem that as the fungus is to be found on the dead leaves, the only thing necessary to do would be to burn the leaves and thus be rid of the disease, but this is not so easy of accomplishment as it may seem, because one can rarely destroy all of the leaves, and allowing even a few to remain would be enough to spread the disease over the crop. The method of prevention is to cover the leaves with a fungicide before the fungus appears, in order that when the fungus does appear it cannot penetrate the cuticle of the leaves. The fungicide must be of a nature to adhere to the leaves and it must also be uninjurious to the plants. The Bordeaux mixture meets these requirements in all but one respect—it discolors the foliage. This fungicide consists of four ounces of copper sulphate, four ounces of lime and two and one-half gallons of water. But for ornamental stock the Bordeaux mixture has the objection of discoloring the foliage and, therefore, a substitute for the above mixture is the use of ammoniacal copper carbonate, which is made as follows: For ten gallons of the solution use one ounce of copper carbonate and ten ounces of ammonium hydroxide. The ammonia should be diluted in seven or eight parts of water. A paste must be made of the copper carbonate, which is then added to the diluted ammonia and stirred until dissolved; then enough water is added to make the ten gallons.

The solution is applied to the plants by means of a spray. An exceedingly high pressure is desired, because in this way the liquid is converted into a fine mist which covers the leaves and does not waste the solution.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Roland to Be Director.

Owing to the pressure of business and the duties in connection with the office of state senator of Connecticut, to which he has been elected, and the important duties in connection with the office of vice-president of the S. A. F., for 1923, Wallace R. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., has placed his resignation as a member of the board of directors in the hands of President Pennock, to take effect December 1, 1922. President Pennock has appointed Thomas Roland, Nahant, Mass., to fill out the unexpired term of Mr. Pierson. President-elect Irwin Bertermann heartily approves of the appointment of Mr. Roland.

MUM STEMS CRACKING.

We have been losing mums, because the stems crack open just under the bud. This occurs mostly with the Turner variety. What is the reason for such cracking?
B. H.—W. Va.

This is, without doubt, due to feeding that has been delayed too long and then applied too strongly. Feed the plants moderately from the time you see the buds and discontinue feeding entirely as soon as the flowers start to show color. You will then, the writer thinks, overcome this stem cracking.
C. W.

MITE ON MUMS.

We have mailed you two of our chrysanthemum plants, with which we are having some trouble. The blooms and leaves are crippled and do not develop the way they should. The varieties are Patty and Smith's Imperial. Can you tell us what the difficulty is and how we can remedy it?

J. D.—W. Va.

Your mum plants are infested by a mite, the name of which we cannot give. The best thing you can do with these infested plants is to pull them up and burn them. Take the soil out a considerable distance from the greenhouse and spread it out so that it will freeze thoroughly this winter. Keep a sharp eye out for a recurrence of this infestation and, at the first sign, start spraying and fumigating with tobacco preparations. If you see it in time, you can keep it under control. This mite will attack other plants than mums. So, use precaution to prevent its spreading to stock adjacent to these infested mums, by using a nicotine spray or tobacco dust.

A. F. J. B.

OUTDOOR MUMS DRYING UP.

What is the trouble with my outdoor hardy mums? They grow vigorously until midsummer and then become brown, while the lower leaves dry and fall off. I cannot detect any insect life or fungus on the plants. The plants are old, but have been divided and transplanted. The application of heat does not seem to make any difference.
H. G.—Pa.

It is possible that some of the trouble is due to the location in which the chrysanthemums are planted. If they are in a hot, dry, exposed situation at any time, the wood will harden and the leaves turn brown; the growth consequently becomes stunted and the flowers will be by no means satisfactory. It is possible that during the hot chairman, James Wilson, surely put real "pep" into the work with a trip which was enjoyed by over 100 members and their families.

Meeting at the store of Knoble Bros., we were treated royally. Then we went on to the store of Fred C. Wittuhn. At this store each machine was draped with an American flag, and the procession headed for Wittuhn's greenhouses. At this range a pleasant half-hour was spent, the ladies doing their best to eat ten pounds of chocolates, while the florists enjoyed cigars.

From this range the party went to the range of Prof. Milton Cutting and was given a demonstration of soil sterilizing, which was exceedingly interesting.

Then we went through the range of the Cuyahoga Greenhouse Co., so ably managed by A. R. Keyse. This range has over six acres under glass.

The establishment of the Growers' Basket Co., coöperatively owned, was then visited. This was an instructive tour and was enjoyed by all the visitors.

The party then journeyed to the new coöperatively owned Cleveland Pottery Co. L. J. Fried, the able manager, did everything possible to make our visit profitable.

Still more entertainment was ahead, however, for we were to take in the famous range of the Pioneer Vegetable Growers. In this range there are nine or ten acres under glass. Mr. Ruetnik gave us a practical demonstration of cleaning glass with oxalic acid. He also took us through his famous cooler, where there were 1,500 cases of celery stored.

It was getting dark, but we were just really starting, for we had a most elegantly prepared chicken supper at the Brooklyn Heights community house, served by the florists whose places we had visited. The ladies in charge were Mrs. F. C. Wittuhn, Miss Dunn, Mrs. Scott, Mrs. Thiessen, Mrs. Ponting, Mrs. Charles Kleyla, Miss Gates, Mrs. Hassny and Mrs. Bylonis.

A vote of thanks and three cheers were given for the feast. Short speeches were made by N. L. Ruetnik, Professor Cutting, Herman P. Knoble, James McLaughlin, A. C. Buskirk, Mr. Henshaw, Miss Getz, A. F. Felton and several others.

We then went upstairs and danced to excellent music. During the evening we were favored with songs by Lynn Rogers and Miss Ruetnik. All in all, this was one of the best trips which the members of the club ever had.

NEW STORE AT ROCHESTER.

These columns carried the report, a few issues ago, of the opening, November 4, of the Flower Shop, at 668 Clinton avenue, north, Rochester, N. Y., by Horace J. Head, well known to the trade in that city and state and in neighboring states. The two accompanying illustrations show the exterior and interior of this store.

The salesroom is artistically finished; the color scheme is light blue with white enamel woodwork, which comprises a good-sized counter, with a mirror at the back, and a wall case opposite. Willow furniture finished in blue and gold and a blue rug add to the charm of the store. Mr. Head conceived the idea of a novel lighting effect, produced by the use of shades made of parchment with blue panel designs, inverted. Blue cretonne of striking design is used as a drape in the window and lends itself admirably to use with the flowers at this season.

Horace J. Head, the proprietor, came to this country from Shefford, Bedfordshire, England, twelve years ago. Within a few days after reaching Rochester he became connected with the store of H. E. Wilson, at 88 East Main street. After completing nine years with Mr. Wilson, he entered the employ of George B. Hart as traveling salesman and held this position for three years, thus becoming well acquainted with the trade. He has been the Rochester correspondent of The Review for about ten years.

weather they become infested with septoria, or leaf-spot, though you simply say that the leaves dry off.

In hot, dry weather chrysanthemums that are not in a position where they can be sprayed vigorously with a hose in the evening, become what is known among gardeners as potbound. A mulch of straw manure, or even hay, if the manure is not available in the summer, is useful; but it must be remembered that chrysanthemums come from a cool country and are "cool-blooded" plants. In the months of July and August, when we are sweltering in heat, these outdoor chrysanthemums are a beautiful object in England and France.

I have seen more fine outdoor chrysanthemums this fall than ever before in my life, and it was particularly pleasing to me to see them in Chicago, and points west, when I had always been informed that it was impossible to bloom hardy chrysanthemums satisfactorily outdoors. This possibly was due to the exceptional season we have enjoyed this year.

It is suggested that you give the plants a mulch in summer and keep the roots cool, vigorously spraying the plants in the hot weather, and giving them a slight protection from the north and west winds. Under these conditions there is no reason why chrysanthemums would not be satisfactory.

NEWPORT, R. I.

Horticultural Society Meeting.

There was an unusual amount of routine business to be transacted at the regular meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society last week, as the officers and committees were anxious to make a good "clean-up," preparatory for the annual meeting in December.

The most important matter discussed was in connection with the plans for the annual convention of the American Garden Association, which is to be held in this city next June. As the Horticultural Society will be one of the most active factors in the exhibition that it is intended to make a feature of the convention, some definite plan is to be outlined.

Robert A. Smith presented the society a handsome glass case in which to enclose the cup presented to the society by the Newport Chamber of Commerce for having the most appropriately decorated float in the big Labor day parade. A vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Smith for the gift.

Various Notes.

Oscar Schultz has just completed an extensive landscape commission on one of the large estates at Narragansett Pier.

John Anderson, long gardener at the George B. Fearing place, on Narragansett avenue, has been engaged by Mr. Thwaites, the new owner, to continue there.

Lewis & Valentine are making extensive alterations at what was formerly the W. B. Leeds estate, now owned by James B. Duke.

John T. Allan is an aldermanic candidate from the Fourth ward.

William Gray, who has been head gardener on the Vanderbilt estate, on Bellevue avenue, for many years, has resigned, but has since been employed as foreman of the men who are laying out the grounds in a new way. He has had a number of opportunities to go elsewhere, but has not yet decided upon the future.

The Market.

Chrysanthemums are in good supply and the market is much stronger than it was a week ago. The wholesalers are holding out for $2 and $3 per dozen on Bonnaffon and $4 and $5 per dozen for Chadwick and Golden Wedding. There are a few exceptions where Chadwick and Seidewitz are selling at $5 and $6 per dozen.

Pompons are scarce; in fact, at no time this fall were pompons in heavy supply in this market. Roses are moving fairly well, with prices a shade higher than they were last week. Some excellent Premier and Russell came in this week. Prices vary from $3 to $4 per hundred for the short-stemmed stock to $20 and $25 per hundred on the long-stemmed varieties. Premier is in heavy demand. American Beauty, while not too plentiful, is selling at from $20 to $50 per hundred.

Carnations, with the exception of white, are none too plentiful at $4 to $6 per hundred. Local violets are short but plentiful and sell for 50 cents per hundred. Calendulas are increasing in supply, but the demand is weak at $3 and $4 per hundred. Small lots of short-stemmed snapdragons are arriving, with fine color and stem, at $5 and $6 per hundred. Callas are exceedingly scarce and sell at $3 per dozen. Valley is arriving again and moving at $6 and $8 per hundred.

Various Notes.

Bulb men are numerous, but it is surprising how few of them get orders.

Mrs. Grengine and Miss Lund are the new clerks at the store of Hess & Swoboda.

Peterson Bros. had a novel window display this week, featuring the American Legion lady and the Red Cross nurse.

The Omaha florists' bowling team defeated the Council Bluffs three out of four games this week. T. E. E.

IOWANS ELECT

IOWA STATE FLORISTS ELECT.

Roy H. Kemble President.

With the exception of R. S. Herrick, secretary, all 1923 officers of the Society of Iowa Florists, elected Thursday, November 16, at the Chamber of Commerce, Council Bluffs, Ia., are new in their respective positions. They were elected as follows: President, Roy H. Kemble, Ottumwa, Ia.; vice-president, E. C. Volz, Ames, Ia.; treasurer, Arthur Smith, Boone, Ia.; secretary, R. S. Herrick, Des Moines, Ia., reelected.

The board of directors for 1923 will consist of Glenn Wilcox, Council Bluffs, for the southwest district; Henry Greeve, Oskaloosa, for the southeast district; Hiram New, Manchester, for the northeast district, and Charles Olsen, of Ames, for the northwest district.

It was decided to enlarge the exchange list service of the organization during the coming year, making it possible for a larger number of firms over Iowa to be benefited by the service. Many satisfactory reports were received from members of the society on the exchange list accommodations. From November 9, 1921, when the service was first adopted, to the present time, Secretary Herrick informed members, the total number of plants listed had reached 416,813. This figure was said to be considerably smaller than the actual number of plants listed, as members had failed to state the amount of plants listed for sale in many cases. The most important varieties of flowers listed, according to Mr. Herrick, were carnations, poinsettias, chrysanthemums, hydrangeas, geraniums, ferns and cannas. In recommending an increase in the exchange list of plants, Mr. Herrick pointed out it would probably create a better demand for the varieties included.

Other important recommendations made by the secretary in his report included close cooperation with the departments of the state pertaining to floriculture and a keeping in closer touch with state and national legislative matters pertaining to culture.

Following an address of welcome by President Blaine Wilcox, Thursday afternoon, November 16, T. W. Lafferty, of Ames, gave an interesting discussion on "Greenhouse Soil Sterilization."

During the morning approximately thirty members of the society were taken on a tour of inspection of the greenhouses in the city. While on this inspection tour, they were given an opportunity of studying sterilization of soil at the Wilcox establishment.

John Reardon, pioneer Ames gardener, gave the final discussion on chrysanthemum culture. He has several exhibits of blue ribbon chrysanthemums entered at the exposition in the Iowa State College display.

Greater expansion of the floral industry was the chief thought expressed by speakers at the florists' banquet at the Grand hotel in the evening. Nearly sixty attended the banquet, with J. S. Wilson, of Des Moines, as toastmaster.

The main address was delivered by W. R. Orchard, editor of the Nonpareil. In his brief remarks, Mr. Orchard said flowers were an important and indispensable factor in development of character. He expressed the conviction that the growers and sellers of flowers were performing a necessary and worth-while service to humanity. As people advance intellectually, morally and religiously, and as they become more highly civilized, their appreciation of flowers increases, he said. The power of the people to consume flowers is not now developed to one-fourth or one-fifth of its possibilities, the speaker declared.

ORCHID SYMPOSIUM AT BOSTON

ODONTOGLOSSUMS AND HYBRIDS.

Require Cool House.

Odontoglossums are the most beautiful of all the cool-growing orchids, but their care and management are quite different here and in Europe, owing to our hot summers. Although natives of tropical countries, they are found at high altitudes, clinging mostly to trees and rocks, where they get an abundant circulation of fresh air all the time. The great problem here is how to keep them cool in summer.

Shading alone will not suffice to keep the temperature down in hot weather. Different methods for keeping the houses cool have been tried, but far the best and most successful is the Skinner sprinkling system on the outside of the room. Water trickling down the roof during the extreme heat of the day will create a cool, moist and pleasant atmosphere.

Floors and benches should be dampened down several times daily. Plenty of ventilation should be given at all times. A winter minimum of 50 to 55 degrees should be maintained, with a rise of 5 to 10 degrees during the day. In summer it should be kept as low as possible. Repotting is best done in October, as the plants resent having their roots disturbed in hot weather. In the fall there is time to get the plants nicely rooted before winter sets in.

Care of Plants.

Potting material should consist of two parts of yellow fibrous peat and one part fresh sphagnum moss, thoroughly mixed together. Coarse fiber should be rejected; the plants much prefer a softer texture. After repotting, careful watering is essential until root growth is well advanced. O. crispum and its numerous varieties require an abundant water supply at all times. O. grande and its varieties do not need so much water as crispum and should be allowed to dry out and rest immediately after flowering. O. citrosum should be grown in a higher temperature. It succeeds well suspended from the roof of the cattleya house and enjoys a good water supply at all seasons.

Among the enemies of odontoglossums are slugs and cockroaches. They destroy spikes when small, often attacking them in the sheaf of the leaf. A piece of cotton wool wrapped around the bases of the bulbs will protect them.

Odontiodas Fare Better Here.

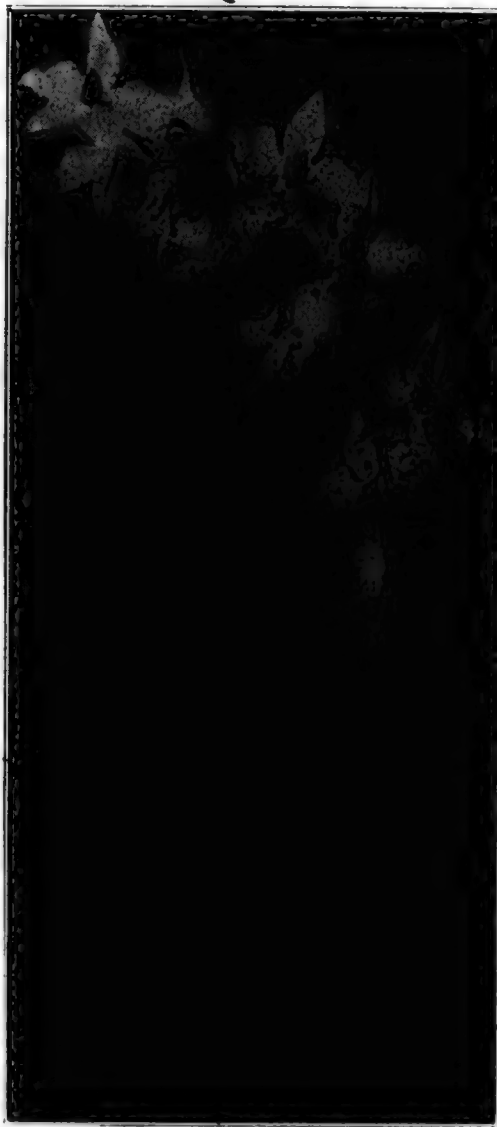

In 1904 the first hybrid odontioda was raised by Charles Vuylsteke, Ghent, Belgium. It was a cross between Cochlidia Noetzeliana and Odontoglossum Pescatorei. There are numerous handsome hybrid odontiodas, mainly raised in Great Britain and Belgium.

Odontiodas can stand our hot summers better than odontoglossums on account of the influence of the warmth-loving parent, cochlidia. Odontiodas in the Berkshire hills of Massachusetts, as grown by A. N. Cooley, of Pittsfield, are almost equal in quality to those seen abroad. There are now many striking odontiodas, the spikes of which are brilliant and attractive to orchid lovers and uninitiated alike.

Good Varieties.

The following is a list of good odontoglossums with which I have succeeded: Andersonianum, a natural hybrid between crispum and gloriosum; citrosum, crispum, the queen of orchids when well grown; cirrhum, Excellent hybrid odontoglossums are Wilsonii, McNabianum, gandavense, Jasper, amabile, formosum, majesticum, St. Peter, percultum, Queen Alexandra, Rolfæ, Phoebe and Titania.

The following I have found to be good odontiodas: Mrs. Ogilvie, Bradshawia, Cooksonia, Othello, Diana, Leeana, Keighleyensis, Papilio, Sanderæ, Thyritesii, Madeline, Charlesworthii, Red Cross, rosefieldensis.

DENDROBIUMS.

Scanning Sources.

There are 300 known species of dendrobiums, but only about 100 of them are cultivated. There is a great variation in respect to the formation of their pseudobulbs, ranging from a short, thin, wiry stem, two inches long, to stong, woody pseudobulbs five feet tall, and as thick as a man's wrist. In fact, there is more diversity in the dendrobium family as regards size, habit, form of stem and leaf shape and color of flowers than in any other member of the family orchidaceæ. The natural distribution of dendrobiums is extensive, embracing the Himalayas, Bermuda, the Malay Archipelago, Australia, China and Japan. None has as yet been found in Africa. They are more abundant in Bermuda than in any other place, and most of our best cultivated varieties have come from there.

Hybridization has increased dendrobiums by about 150 varieties; among these are some of the most beautiful varieties. One of the earliest hybrids was D. Dominicanum, D. Linawianum x D. nobile, raised by Veitch in 1864. The old D. chrysanthemum was introduced as long ago as 1898. All dendrobiums have a growing and resting period. During the growing season they thrive in an abundantly moist atmosphere, even to the saturation point, but, on completion of the growths, water must be gradually withheld and a lower and drier temperature given them.

Methods of Growing.

Often one finds finely grown plants ruined by the grower suddenly withholding all water and placing the plants in an airy, cool house and giving them no further attention. Treated in this manner, the pseudobulbs start to shrivel prematurely, instead of ripening gradually, and there is little bloom later. The best way is always to withhold gradually the water in the house where they are growing; as the foliage becomes yellow, remove them to the warm end of an airy house until they have shed all foliage, when they should have all the light and air possible. I am now referring to deciduous varieties only.

The following are some of the showiest and most useful varieties I have grown: D. Wardianum, introduced in 1858, usually opens as the new growth pushes up, when the plants must be kept warm and moist; D. nobile Cooksonianum was introduced from China in 1836 and was shown in London in 1888, carrying 200 blooms. D. nobile nobiliss has larger flowers than nobile; D. nobile Sanderianum has large and brilliant flowers. D. moschatum has balls five to six feet long, has flowers of pale yellow, the lip resembling a calceolaria, blotched with maroon, and has a musk-like odor; it was introduced from Burma in 1895, it blooms in May and

An Interesting Family Tree.

D. MacCarthiae is a native of Ceylon. It is not an easy grower, must be kept growing until the new year and has lavender flowers. D. Jenkinsii is only two inches high and succeeds in a cattleya house. D. infundibulum has flowers four inches across, balls two feet long and white flowers, the lip being fringed and stained yellow and red. D. Hookerianum is an autumn bloomer, has balls five feet long and has flowers three inches across. D. formosum, a fine commercial variety, has flowers four inches across, which are pure white and equal to a cattleya; this is a spring bloomer and lasts several weeks fresh in a cool house. D. fimbriatum has balls two to five feet long, has deep orange flowers, blooms in April and May, is a native of northern India and was introduced just a century ago, 1822; the same stems flower for several years and a specimen plant shown in England carried 123 racemes and 1,216 blooms.

Some Good Varieties.

D. Falconeri is a thin-bulb sort and it flowers in early spring. D. Farmeri blooms in May and is an evergreen variety. D. Devonianum is exceedingly showy; it flowers in May and June on 3-foot balls, is a native of India, was first flowered in 1837, and named in honor of the duke of Devonshire. D. Dearei is a Philippine introduction, which likes strong heat; pure white flowers come from the top of the balls, and this is a valuable commercial variety. D. Dalhousieanum flowers from the same balls for several years, is a robust grower, and has flowers three to four inches across, which are yellow, with crimson blotches.

D. Griffithianum is closely allied to D. densiflorum and D. crassinode needs the same treatment as Wardianum. D. Parishii is similar to D. nobile, but the balls are pendulous. D. Phalaenopsis Schroederianum is one of the most valuable orchids grown; the spikes carry six to eighteen flowers, which are lilac in color, with a pale throat; it needs an exceedingly high and moist temperature; withhold water gradually for two months in resting period, but leave the plants in the same house. The first plant collected by Forbes went to Kew in 1857, where the only known plant in cultivation was for years highly prized. It grew well and in time Sir Joseph Hooker was enabled to exchange three pieces for other plants. The Veitch's, Baron Schroeder and Mr. Day, of Tottenham, secured the plants. Baron Schroeder eventually secured the Veitch and Day plants, and so it remained until rediscovered by Micholitz, one of Sander's collectors, in 1891, on an island in the Malay Archipelago, not New Guinea as often reported.

It was found growing on and in limestone in an old burying ground, where the bodies were left on the ground and left to decompose. Thus it was that one of the plants, D. Phalaenopsis, sold in London October 16, 1891, was attached to a human skull! D. Pierardii is an old variety, introduced in 1815. D. thyrsiflorum is similar to D. densiflorum, with round, instead of angular, bulbs; it blooms in April and is a Burmese variety, cultivated since 1864.

Potting.

The potting, if required, should be done as soon as the plants show signs of life. The plants do well suspended in a house protected from direct sun rays, where there is plenty of atmospheric moisture and a temperature of 65 degrees. When the growths are half developed, weak manure and soot water proves beneficial, applied once a week. This is only for deciduous varieties, and must cease when growth is completed. Evergreen varieties do best left in the growing house the year around, with water withheld partly in the growing season. On the deciduous varieties, larger and better colored blooms will be obtained if the plants are taken from resting quarters when the buds start to swell on the pseudobulbs, are given one good soaking of water and are then placed in a warmer house.

Deciduous varieties are easily propagated. One can soon make flowering-sized plants by cutting some 2-year-old bulbs in pieces about four inches long and inserting them around the edge of a 4-inch pot filled with charcoal, fern fiber and chopped sphagnum, suspending the pot in a shady part of a growing house with a temperature of 70 degrees and syringing but not watering them.

My experience is that deciduous dendrobiums benefit if one cuts out the old bulbs after about the third year. This does not apply to evergreen varieties or such varieties as fimbriatum and Dalhousieanum, which bloom several years from the same bulbs.

Insect Pests.

Dendrobies are subject to attacks of thrips and red spider, and when the growths are young, to green fly. These are easily kept away by the use of a good insecticide and by spraying periodically at the rate of one part insecticide to twenty of water. Whenever possible, rain water should be used for dendrobies. Unfortunately, no provision is made here, as in England, for rain water. Its influence is far superior to that of water from underground sources.

Dendrobies are not grown so largely as formerly, but no members of the orchid family respond and give good results more quickly than these lovely plants. W. N. C.

EAST INDIAN ORCHIDS.

Vandas Come First.

I have been asked to say a few words about East Indian orchids other than phalaenopsis, which was discussed at a meeting here a year ago. So many showy and botanical orchids are imported from this section of the orchid world that it would be impossible to enumerate them all. However, I shall name the best and most useful varieties.

Vandas come first, being the most showy and stately of all orchids, and should be included in every orchid collection, flowering at various seasons of the year. The most showy varieties bloom in the spring and summer months. Vanda tricolor and its varieties come first; these often flower three times during the season and, when well grown, are among the most stately orchids in existence.

Many growers advocate too high a temperature. I have always found a medium temperature the best.

Another feature that renders these vandas useful as decorative plants is the lasting quality of the flowers; these often remain in good condition for two months. The best autumn-flowering variety is the well known V. cærulea, coming in all shades of blue and most attractive when included in a group of orchids. The last addition to this family is V. luzonica, from the Philippines, with white flowers marked with rose purple on the margins of the sepals and petals, and of easy cultivation.

Sanderiana Leads.

The most attractive vanda is Sanderiana. This most remarkable species, from the Philippines, flowers in autumn, and its large flowers last from four to five weeks in good condition. A magnificent plant of this vanda, carrying 135 flowers, was shown in London a few years ago and received a gold medal from the Royal Horticultural Society of England.

Some good vandas of easy cultivation are cærulea, Amesiana, cærulescens, Digest of a talk delivered by George Lyddiard, before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, November 21.

Odontioda Vuylstekeae.

Denisoniana, Hookeriana, insignis, Kimballiana, lamellata Boxallii, teres and its hybrid, Agnes Joaquin; tricolor, tricolor planelabris, tricolor tenebrosa, suavis and the fine hybrid, Marguerite Maron, a cross between teres and suavis.

Excluded species often called vandas are Vanda Batemanii, now called Stauroopsis lissochiloides; V. Cathcartii, now called Arachnanthe Cathcartii; V. gigantea, now called Stauroopsis gigantea, and V. Lowei, once called Arachnanthe Lowei, and more recently Renanthera Lowei.

Aërides Next in Favor.

Aërides come next in favor to vandas, with long racemes of beautiful, fragrant, waxy flowers. Colors range from pure white to deep rose, and all the varieties are of easy cultivation, requiring the same conditions as vandas. The best varieties are crassifolium, crispum, Houlletianum, falcatum, Leonæi, Fieldingii, Lawrenceanum, maculosum, Lobbii, odoratum and its varieties, suavissimum, suavissimum Ballantineanum and virens.

Rhynchostylis, better known in gardens as saccolabium, is an interesting class, worthy of cultivation. It blooms in summer. The best varieties are cœlestis, with pale lavender flowers, the only blue variety in cultivation; guttata; præmorsa retusa, often called Blumei. Varieties of the saccolabium type are few; the most showy are ampullaceum, bellinum, giganteum, giganteum illustre, violaceum and the long, pure white violaceum Harrisonianum.

Angræcums a Remarkable Family.

Angræcums are a remarkable family on account of the long, tail-like spurs attached to the labellum, which is a distinguishing characteristic of all varieties from the largest one, A. sesquipedale, to the small hybrids. The flowers of A. sesquipedale are always attractive, with their white, waxy flowers five inches to seven inches in diameter, carried four to five on a spike and having a strong fragrance at night. A. eburneum is a giant in the orchid family, with spikes three to four feet long, carrying nine to twelve flowers each, which last in good condition for five weeks. A. citratum is the most showy of the smaller section, with spikes fifteen inches to twenty inches long and flowers sulphur-yellow in color. The flowering period is January and February. Varieties interesting to botanists and orchid lovers are articulatum, cryptodon, Ellisii, modestum, hyaloides, fastuosum and Leonis.

Renantheras are useful orchids on account of their bright red color and long, graceful spikes, attractive in groups or for cutting, but their varieties are limited. R. Imschootiana is the best known commercially of the genus and is a good grower. Other varieties are Storiei, matutina and coccinea.

Cultural Methods.

The temperature of a house for East Indian orchids during the growing season, from March to October, should be 70 to 75 degrees during the day, rising with sun heat to 80 degrees. Of course, in summer these temperatures will often be exceeded. At night the house can drop to 66 or 68 degrees. In the winter and resting season 60 to 65 degrees at night is ample, and a few degrees lower will do no harm. During the growing season give plenty of moisture at all times. In winter, when strong fire heat is used, care must be taken or the plants will become infested with yellow thrips, which disfigure the young leaves. During the growing season practice spraying between the pots, stems and roots. This will be of great benefit and makes watering needless; the many aerial roots will take up the moisture. In hot weather fine overhead spraying is helpful in keeping thrips down. Use care, however, with rhynchostylis; it should not be sprayed over, as it is subject to black spot.

Potting of East Indian orchids is best done in January and February. Clear away all the old material, wash the roots and use good osmunda fiber and live sphagnum moss, not the dead moss often seen, with which you have to kill the plant to make the moss grow.

There are many more species of East Indian orchids, such as ancætochilus, cirrhopetalums, bulbophyllum, cœlogyne, eulophiellas, grammatophyllum, platyclinis, or dendrochilums, and phaius, all well worthy of being included in collections, but today selections are mainly grown. GROWING CYMBIDIUMS.

The terrestrial orchids, cymbidiums, have advanced tremendously in favor of late years and are striking features at all our great spring exhibitions. They are robust growers and need plenty of root room. I use a liberal layer of drainage material, then a layer of peat, then a dusting of bone meal, topped by some of the finer particles of peat. The plant is then placed in position and well firmed with fern fiber.

Cymbidiums come mainly from India and the Malay archipelago. A few are found in Africa. Strange to say, until 1900 there were few varieties in commerce; they were mainly eburneum, Lowianum, Tracyanum and Hookerianum. In 1901 one of the orchid collectors in Annam found Cymbidium insigne; it was first sent to France; later Mr. Sanders acquired it. The discovery of this lovely cymbidium revolutionized cymbidium culture; as more specimens of it were discovered and sent home, it was found to be quite varied in character and Sandersii, Sanderæ and other varietal names were given to various types, and from insigne has sprung the wealth of beautiful hybrids now in cultivation.

Hybrids have been raised in great numbers in Belgium and Britain. At Sir George Holford's, in England, large numbers of wonderful hybrids have come of late years. Cymbidiums stay fresh two or more months on the plants and several weeks in water. On several occasions spikes have been sent from Europe and staged at spring flower shows here.

When we first grew cymbidiums, it was in the oldest house we possessed, one that is now used for odontoglossums and cypripediums. Later the cymbidiums were put into a house kept at 50 to 55 degrees at night; stood over ashes, they did well. Later they were put on slat benches and did not do so well. Now they are in an old, wide house standing over a layer of coal

June and is a vigorous variety. The flowers last only a week.

Propagation by means of back bulbs is easy, and well flowering plants may be had in three or four years. I keep the plants somewhat tied up, as the leaves have such a wide spread. Spraying occasionally with a nicotine and soap solution will keep the plants free from scale and other insect pests. I do not approve of feeding; air and water, not feeding, make orchids flourish. The potting should be done as the plants start to grow. Flowers sell all the way from $4 to $12 per dozen, wholesale.

Good varieties are Lowianum, always a good seller; eburneum, eburneo, Lowianum, Tracyanum, Pauwelsii, Schlegelii, Rachel, insigne Sanderæ, Wiganianum, Doris, Mastersii, Schroederæ and Alexanderi. A considerable number of fine new hybrids are now coming out each year, but the insigne section is most popular and the flowers are in greatest demand. I look to see cymbidiums among the leading commercial orchids in this country in a few years. W. N. C.

ORCHID MYCORRHIZA.

There can be no question that this fungus, when properly used, will completely revolutionize the raising of orchids from seed in many ways, by shortening the period from germination to flowering, by promoting much sturdier growth and by inducing far greater germinative qualities in the seeds themselves.

It has been known for years by expert orchid growers that there was a form of fungus which helped the growth and stamina of the plants wonderfully, but what this so-called orchid fungus really was, remains a mystery to us. It was first mentioned and studied by T. G. Hylands, in 1842, but it is due to Renssick, in 1847, that we have our first real knowledge of this fungus relation to plant life. That was over seventy years ago. The world's botanical experts have studied this fungus slowly, but persistently, but it has been left to J. Ramsbottom, of the noted orchid firm of Charlesworth & Co., Haywards Heath, England, to make real progress through the discovery of methods for successfully cultivating this fungus, or mycorrhiza, and through discovering several varieties of this fungus and determining the various orchids which they benefit. The knowledge he has secured has been put to practical use by the Charlesworth firm, with marvelous results.

One who recently visited Haywards Heath, England, and who is a keen and observant orchid grower, said that the flasks containing the mycorrhiza, in which the seeds of various orchids are grown, looked as if they were lined with green velvet, flecked by numbers of orchid seedlings growing within the flask.

Mr. Ramsbottom has kept cattleya seed for a year, and found that its germinating power has in no way lessened, as proved by the masses of seedlings appearing in the flasks. He hopes to curtail greatly the period between seed sowing and flowering, especially with the cattleya family. His researches are still being carried on with the most promising results, but, of course, all this work is so far being kept strictly secret, there being only three persons in the world who know the secret of the cultivation of this fungus, its varieties and the practical method of using it on orchids. NEW YORK.

The Market.

The cut flower market is a little more active than it was, arrivals in all lines cleaning up fairly well. The mum supply is at its height, and the last of the late varieties appears to be in. There is not much chance for most of the other commodities to increase in value until there is a lessening of the mum supply; this is looked for in a week or ten days. High-priced stock is small in quantity, and is nothing as a factor in the market.

The supply of roses is not particularly large, but arrivals move slowly under the pressure of the chrysanthemum. American Beauty is plentiful; rather too much so for the demand, which is poor. Hybrid teas in the short grades are small in supply, but there is rather more than a sufficiency in extras, fancies and specials.

The supply of cattleyas has shortened still further. Gardenias are not plentiful.

Easter lilies are in fair supply, and values have advanced a little. Lily of the valley is not quite so plentiful as it has been. Violets are anywhere in price, now that the big event calling for them has passed. There is a moderate supply of sweet peas and the quality is good.

The line of herbaceous flowers is not extensive. There are blue lace flowers, stevia, myosotis, snapdragons and Paper White narcissi. There are callas, calendulas, pansies and wallflowers.

Carnations are in greatly increased supply, and some flowers of good quality are now seen.

Distorted Political Views.

I was much interested in European politics and I found the people, both in France and Germany, more than willing to "talk politics." The instances I shall mention and statements I may make in the following are not the result of a solitary voice here or there, but in every case the opinion of the majority is expressed. The French people say they "lost" the war, and England, America and Germany won it. I pointed out that for her billions spent, America did not ask an inch of ground or a cent of indemnity; at this, they would say, "Well, England and Germany won, anyway, and if it had not been for your President Wilson, the Rhine would now be the boundary; we foolishly listened to him, not thinking at the time that he was more for the Germans than for us."

The French people were little less bitter towards England, and especially Lloyd George, who, they declared, sacrificed France for German trade. As soon as I had crossed the border into Germany, I was told that if it had not been for our President Wilson, Germany would not have lost the war; the Germans said his speeches caused the German revolution, which, in turn, caused the loss of the war; further, they said Germany laid down her arms, thinking she would get the benefit of Mr. Wilson's fourteen points, which he then promptly forgot. Please remember that the German expressions herein came from business men, college students, newspaper editors, railroad men, taxi drivers, office clerks, chambermaids and errand boys, as I purposely conversed with people in as many different walks of life as possible, to get at the heart of Germany.

Obdurate in Errors.

In vain I pointed out that they, the Germans, turned down the fourteen points when offered, that Mr. Wilson referred them to General Foch when they asked terms, and that at Versailles Mr. Wilson was only one man representing one country among such enemies of Germany as Clemenceau, Lloyd George, Orlando, King Albert and a dozen others, whose only desire was to get all they could out of it, and, even had he desired to give Germany an easier peace, the majority against him was about ten to one, and, looking at it from the other angle, that he did fool them, it was as much his right and privilege as head of the American army to make feints and bluffs, as it was of Von Hindenburg.

There is your French and German view of Mr. Wilson, but, while I was traveling with a London wholesale toy buyer one day, he remarked to me, "It's too bad that we listened to President Wilson, as we had them licked and should have talked peace when our army entered Berlin. Then we would not have had this spectacle of begging the Germans to pay their indemnity." So, you see, poor Mr. Wilson is the goat everywhere.

The original cause of the war, they declared, was England's jealousy of commercial Germany, which they determined to destroy for all time; at this, I would inquire why England was now trying its best to build Germany commercially, but I could not get an opinion on this.

A Berlin editor told me that the German government never permitted anything favorable to the Allies to be printed and that the fourteen points were not given out in their true form until some time later. The great failure, they would say, was that Germany did not buy the press in the United States and borrow huge sums of money from us, as the British did, and thus influence us to Germany's way of thinking, and make us protect our invest-

The description of horticultural conditions in Europe, by E. J. McCallum, which appeared in The Review November 16, proved so generally of interest that he has supplemented it with this article on political and economic conditions abroad. Since speaking before the Pittsburgh Florists' Club, Mr. McCallum has talked on the same subject before the Western Pennsylvania Florists' Association and the Detroit Florists' Club, as well as several organizations outside the trade, and will speak before the Cleveland Florists' Club December 5.

ment by helping Germany, or at least by not helping England. I inquired as to why so foolish a move had been attempted as trying to get Mexico to attack us, since a couple of American regiments stationed on the border could take care of them. At this the Germans would query: "Why, did not Mexico give America a hard fight for a long time?" While many admitted they knew it was "all over" when America entered the war, yet many said that at the time they did not think it made any difference, as it would be over long before America could get any men over, and that the fast manner in which we pushed war preparations simply rushed them off their feet and spread demoralization throughout the German army.

Their opinion as to why the United States entered the war was that we had lent all the Allies billions of dollars and, seeing that Germany was about to win, we jumped into the war to save our gold.

The Lusitania question was disposed of by saying it was a war ship carrying munitions and was quite properly sunk.

Surprises.

During the war the German people actually did starve, many of them to death, and even today one can see the bad effects left in some of the living. People told me that they lived on nothing but turnips for weeks at a time. They were allowed a piece of meat each week, the weight of which I have forgotten, but it was so small that it was hardly worth while. More than once I was told of fine sawdust being mixed with flour and then baked into bread, not for any nourishment, of course, but just to fill the stomach. This condition lasted two years and was a strain that no nation could withstand unless they were firmly of the opinion that they were in the right. Almost all the animals in the zoo were killed and eaten, the famous collection of Karl Hagenbeck in Hamburg being entirely disposed of. War cripples are seen everywhere, and there are few men in Germany today who cannot show you at least one wound. I was frequently asked if I fought in France, and when I replied that married men were not in the army, they would express the greatest surprise and immediately comment to their friends on such an unheard-of thing.

Reason for Failure.

A man who held a responsible position with the German government during the war told me that the first drive on Paris failed because of misunderstood orders, Von Moltke by mistake ordering his army to retreat just before he was to effect a junction with Von Kluck and the Crown Prince. This surprised me so much that I later asked a newspaper editor if it was true; he immediately replied that it was. I still felt doubtful and later asked a student of the University of Leipzig, who was a student of the war, and he also confirmed it. Of course, they all said the fact was never allowed to be printed in the newspapers.

The hatred of the French is at the boiling point and the most certain thing that can ever happen is that there will soon be another war between the French and Germans. Even the youngsters on the street will proudly tell you what they are going to do to France in a few years. The Germans say they must stand by and see trainload after trainload of German coal go to France when most of them have no coal to heat their dwellings and the chances are rather slim to get enough to be comfortable this winter. They see their children going without milk because, they say, the French have taken their cows. They must pay unheard-of prices for wood because, it is declared, the forests are being chopped down and sent to France, and German newspapers, especially the weekly comics, keep prodding poor Michael with full-page cartoons, which keep him at fever heat. I am not expressing my own opinion, but am giving you the German viewpoint.

At Gernersheim I stopped over night

WESTERN WONDERS

GUY FRENCH IN WEST.

Visits near Los Angeles.

Guy French, now traveling on the Pacific coast, writes interestingly of the establishments he inspected in the vicinity of Los Angeles. Of what is to be seen there now, he tells as follows:

"I arrived in Los Angeles on a Sunday. Monday morning, E. B. Washburn met me at Sierra Madre and piloted me through the sixteen acres of lath houses of Bassett & Washburn, all filled with palms of various sizes and in various stages of growth. Some houses were filled with single plants, others with made-up stock, two and three to a pot. After we had gone through the place, Mr. Washburn took me to the Country Club at Pasadena for lunch, then for a drive around the city and finally to the depot. There I caught a car back to Los Angeles, where I changed cars and went to Montebello.

"Here Roy F. Wilcox took me in charge and showed me through his extensive establishment, first the greenhouses, devoted to roses exclusively, then the acres and acres of lath houses, filled with palms. Here, as at Bassett & Washburn's, they were busy putting oil stoves in the place as a safeguard against another freeze. Then we inspected the nursery grounds. There is no shortage of boxwood here; there are all sizes and shapes in perfect condition. Heather is a big item here. It is all grown in pots outdoors, in frames, timed to come in from now until Easter. Mr. Wilcox has built himself a bungalow across the street from the nursery, and although it was finished only in April, the grounds have the appearance of being at least 2 or 3 years old. After dinner at the Wilcox home, Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox took me back to Los Angeles in their car.

Biggest on the Coast.

"The next day I went out to Sawtelle, where Walter Armacost took me around his place. He has the largest and best laid out place that I have seen on the coast. The stock is in excellent condition. There is a nice cut of roses now, and an immense crop of splendid stock timed just right for Christmas. Here I saw 150,000 cyclamen plants in 6-inch, 8-inch and 10-inch pots in the pink of perfection. Heather is a big item here, too, and is shipped all over the country. Mr. Armacost recently built two orchid houses and has them filled with newly imported hybrids. The immense lath houses of asparagus have recovered from the freeze of last year, and this item is again being cut in quantity.

"I then went out to visit our friend Alois Frey, at San Fernando, and spent the night with him. He recently purchased a 20-acre tract of land a few miles from his home, which is ideal for growing freesias. The soil is mellow and friable, and does not bake, as did the soil at the old place. He has ten acres planted with colored freesias, which are now up about six inches and as clean as a whistle.

Roses to Remember.

"Fred Howard, of Howard & Smith, called for me and took me to their rose gardens, near San Fernando. It was a sight I shall not soon forget. There were seventy acres in roses; as fine a lot of stock as a man ever saw. The plants were literally overflowing with health and vigor. They have a considerable number of standards, the first I have seen in a long time. From there we drove to Mr. Howard's home, at Montebello, where we spent the night.

"The next day we drove over to the Rivera place. Howard & Smith have three places, one at Rivera, one at Montebello and one at San Fernando. At Rivera they have more roses and also a complete line of nursery and bulbous stock. The greenhouses and lath houses, as well as extensive fields, are at Montebello. At Montebello their nursery is right in the oil fields, and an oil well derrick has grown right up out of the nursery grounds and an oil well has grown down about 1,500 feet. There is no excitement about it at all. Fred Howard says there is time enough to get excited when the oil flows.

"They have 250,000 hybrid amaryllis in all colors and shades."

East Bridgewater, Mass.—J. K. Alexander has gone on a western trip, with Hubbard, Ore., as his destination. It is thought he may establish a dahlia farm there, leaving the one here to the management of his son, Herbert, and H. C. Bacon.

Utica, N. Y.—Snell & Brown have completed their new greenhouse at Henry and Walnut streets. The new structure adds 10,000 square feet of glass to the range, bringing the total number of square feet of the range to 15,000. Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Snell left November 22 for Daytona Beach, Florida, where they will spend the winter.

Valencia, Pa.—Mr. and Mrs. George Lewis Curry, of this town, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Sarah Morrison Curry, to John T. Clever, of Mars, Pa., which occurred Tuesday afternoon, November 21. The Reverend J. N. Hunter, of the First Presbyterian church, Blairsville, Pa., performed the ceremony. The wedding music was played by the bride's brother, George M. Curry, who is a graduate of Carnegie "Tech" and the University of Pittsburgh. Miss Irene Fleet, of Pittsburgh, Pa., was maid of honor and Edward P. Curry, a brother of the bride, was best man. Mr. and Mrs. Clever will reside at Treedale Farms, Mars, Pa.

GERANIUM CUTTINGS.

What is the rule to determine when geranium cuttings have rooted and are ready to be potted? What is meant by the reference, in regard to geraniums, "ready to break"? L. J. S.—Pa.

As soon as cuttings have made a nice bunch of roots, two to three inches long, they can be potted. If time and space forbid potting them when they are ready, keep them much on the dry side and pot them as soon as possible in 2¼-inch pots. The expression "ready to break" means ready to make new breaks or shoots. C. W.

GERANIUMS TURNING YELLOW.

In my last few blocks of geranium cuttings there have been several overgrown plants. In potting these last cuttings nearly all the leaves would turn yellow and drop off before they had started in the soil. What is the cause of this trouble? R. L.—Ind.

The cuttings in question had probably been too long on the cutting bench and had made a soft, flabby growth. It would be just as well to cut back any more such plants at potting time. Your treatment was probably the best the cuttings could get, and cuttings, especially if they have been in the propagating bench or on the railroad for some time, are quite likely to lose considerable foliage. After the first watering, to settle the soil, which is better if slightly sandy, keep the plants somewhat on the dry side until root action starts. Then water more freely. Give the plants full sunshine all the time. C. W.

GERANIUMS DAMPING OFF.

I am mailing you a specimen of my geranium stock. Kindly inform me what is the matter with this stock, and whether or not the stock can be sold for rooted cuttings. S. G.—Ill.

Of the three geranium cuttings received, only one was in fairly good condition and had some roots; another had damped off and was valueless, while the third was only calloused. The cuttings were exceedingly small, and were not such as I should care to send out to anyone for rooted cuttings. It is impossible to tell what the trouble with the plants is without knowing something of the cultural and other conditions under which they grew; perhaps you are keeping them too damp at the roots. When the cuttings are rooted, if they are still in the cutting bench, they should be kept on the dry side. C. W.

THE SEMINARIUM.

At Pennsburg, Pa.

In the beautiful valley of the Perkiomen river, at Pennsburg, Pa., truth is found in the adage, "Like father, like son." Here, on the state road between Philadelphia and Allentown, Pa., a road which is much traveled by tourists, O. L. Henry & Son have marked another milestone on the road of progress by the completion of an addition to their range. The elder Mr. Henry entered the trade in 1898. By constant application and fair dealing, he built up a prosperous business. With the entrance of the younger Henry into the firm, it received an additional impetus.

A wholesale and retail business in growing is carried on by the Henrys, and at the present time a fine crop of Christmas cherries is to be seen here. In addition, the firm handles cut flowers and plants, together with a large assortment of ferns. Pennsburg is so situated that the firm can make rapid delivery of cut flowers and funeral designs to Schwenkville, Spring Mount, Perkiomenville, Green Lane, Red Hill, Sunnyside, Barto, Pa., and many other towns not far distant. The firm also has a great many shrubs, evergreens and fruit trees in its nursery, and the intention is to add a large assortment of high-grade dahlias to the plants now grown outdoors.

The accompanying illustration shows the exterior of a portion of the addition to the range which has just been completed. Henry & Son have given their establishment the euphonious title of "The Seminarium," which is good Latin for a place where seeds produce their plants.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

["Fritz Bahr's Commercial Floriculture; a Practical Manual for the Retail Grower," by Fritz Bahr. Published by the A. T. De La Mare Co., Inc., New York. Contains 559 pages, with 288 halftone illustrations, and is handsomely bound in green, waterproof material. Price, $5.]

The author of this book is included among the fortunate few who are about equally proficient in deed and in word, in attending to the practical details of their business and in explaining their methods of work to others. For many years Mr. Bahr has continuously demonstrated that he possesses this twofold skill, this facility both in business performance and in verbal expression. A large number of his fellow florists, therefore, have long been appreciative readers of his horticultural articles and are ready to welcome any of his literary offerings. And this book may reasonably be presumed to be his most mature, most finished intellectual product. Like an exhibition plant from an experienced grower, it is undoubtedly the best possible result of long practiced ability.

The subject of which the author treats is a vast one, involving some consideration of the upbuilding and management of the retail grower's business in all its departments—in store, greenhouse and field. The book is divided into two main parts or sections. Part I, entitled "The Retail Grower's Methods," presents with notable clearness and thoroughness the general principles that are essential to success. By "general principles" is not meant mere abstract ideas, but definite, practical rules of conduct. Some slight realization of the value of Part I may be gathered from these samples of the chapter headings and subtitles: "A Few Pointers for the Beginner, Indoors and Outdoors all the Year Round, The Retail Grower and His Equipment, Benches, Hotbeds, Coldframes, Composts, Manures and Fertilizers, Greenhouse Heating, Crop Rotation and Its Results, Diseases of Plants, Side Line Possibilities for Retail Growers, Important Flower Days of was noticed in all the florists' shops Friday evening before the big game, when thousands stopped here at the large hotels over night. Kenneth MacKay, at the Bono hotel, did an unusually large business in violets and chrysanthemums. The Harvard supporters gave their wives, sweethearts and sisters red roses. Yale rooters gave their wives and guests violets. All the women at the hotels were wearing bouquets Saturday morning, in sup-

the Year, Basket and Window Box Plants, Bedding Stock, Perennials and Biennials and How to Use Them." Let the foregoing titles suffice as specimens, though perhaps the best manner of reviewing Part I would be to publish the entire table of contents.

In Part II, "A Cultural Manual; Plants for the Retail Grower and How to Grow Them," the scope of the subject is so nearly infinite that exhaustive treatment of it would be utterly impossible. The author was continually curbed by the limitations of his space. The culture of the staple commercial varieties, of course, is most fully discussed and hundreds of other varieties are dealt with more briefly, while many of the less common species are necessarily omitted entirely. Such judicious condensation would be requisite even if this new work consisted of several good-sized volumes instead of one.

The publisher's high opinion of the author's achievement is manifest in the first-class artistic and mechanical construction of the book. Its contents, evidently, were deemed worthy of the best material embodiment that the publisher could supply. An effort was made to match the fine head work of the author with the best handiwork of the printer. Therefore, in quality of paper, typography, illustrations and binding the book is of high grade.

Any reader of The Review who desires a copy of the book may obtain it from The Review's book department at the publisher's price.

HARTFORD, CONN.

Roses, carnations and chrysanthemums are plentiful, with a normal demand.

There were no local violets on the market for the big Yale-Harvard game Saturday, November 25. Great activity port of their favorite team. Some of the florists who had put in an unusually heavy supply of violets for the Saturday night trade were left with several bunches in their iceboxes, as Yale was defeated and the demand was for red roses and crimson mums. Roses were retailing at $1.50, $2 and $3 per dozen; violets, $4 per bunch of 100; chrysanthemums, $2, $3 and $6 per dozen; pompons, $1 per bunch.

The W. W. Thomson Co., West Hartford, Conn., is making large shipments of chrysanthemums of a high quality to the New York markets.

E. I. Farrington, of Boston, gave an interesting and instructive lecture with stereopticon views on the Arnold Arboretum, Jamaica Plain, Mass., at the old state house here Friday evening, November 24. It was thoroughly enjoyed by a large audience of the Connecticut Horticultural Society and guests.

At a meeting of the Hartford florists held recently at the City Club, it was voted to assess all the florists in this vicinity $4,000, to be used in a cooperative way for advertising for the coming year; $1,000 to be given to the national publicity fund. This money is to be collected in four installments and will be spent as required during the year. Joseph Coombs, Joseph McManus, George Lane, J. Albert Brodrib and Wallace Thomson, chairman, were appointed as a committee to arrange for the expenditure of the money. It is expected the next meeting will be held early in December, affording all the florists an opportunity to attend. Other years these meetings have been held near the big Christmas holiday, when all florists are busy, with the result that the attendance has been rather slim, and it is hoped this year that all those interested will attend this meeting, as the cooperative advertising has proved a wonderful boost and will help all in a good spirit to "Say It with Flowers."

George F. Lane's recent window displays have attracted the attention of the large crowds who pass daily. Friday, November 24, the windows were a solid mass of blue for Yale and crimson for Harvard, which caught the eyes of the football enthusiasts who promenaded by the artistically lighted windows filled with violets and crimson roses and mums and was the fore-runner of some good business.

J. Albert Brodrib has recently redecorated the interior of his store, on Main street, which adds to its beauty.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

The volume of business last week was small and the market was depressed. There is every evidence, though, that business will be good this winter.

For Thanksgiving business, stock was plentiful and prices stiffened. Carnations have increased in price anywhere from $1 to $2 per hundred. This stock is good and is improving each week. Chrysanthemums are the strength of the market. Some Turner and Yellow Turner are bringing from $6 per dozen up. Fine bronze and red varieties are also bringing good prices. Bonnaffon, Rager, Chieftain and Whittier were all in good supply for the holiday. Pompons are plentiful and sell at 35 cents to 75 cents per bunch, according to variety. Violets meet with a little better sale than last week. Roses are not in good demand, and it is surprising how the sale has dropped off. Their quality is good. Cattleyas and cypripediums are in fair supply and move well. Lilies of the valley are more abundant and some fine stock is offered. Bouvardia is good and sells easily.

Various Notes.

E. R. Fry is disposing of a good quantity of Boston ferns, which are healthy-looking plants. He reports excellent business at his retail establishment.

Rochester florists were shocked when they learned of the sudden death of Robert H. C. Bard, of Syracuse. "Bobby," as he was generally known, was a familiar and well liked florist, and his cheery disposition will be sadly missed. His visits to this city were frequent.

Harry Merritt, of St. Paul boulevard, is cutting a good quantity of Pink Delight carnations. They are in splendid condition, and he estimates there are at least 30,000 buds in the greenhouse.

George T. Boucher had an exquisite window decoration last week, in which cyclamens and pompons predominated. Gold and lavender cloth was used as drapes.

McGregor's had a pretty wedding decoration at the Blessed Sacrament cathedral Tuesday morning, November 21. Immense vases of white and yellow chrysanthemums, with a profusion of palms, were effectively arranged. The bouquets were of white orchids and bouvardia.

H. J. H.

November 21, the class in "Wholesaling and Retailing Flowers," under Professor Arno H. Nehrling at Cornell University, made an observation trip to Rochester. The first place visited was the wholesale establishment of George B. Hart, at 47 Stone street. There followed equally interesting and instructive visits to the retail stores of J. B. Keller Sons, Alberts, Salter Bros., Boucher's and H. E. Wilson. This course in wholesaling and retailing flowers was an innovation at Cornell this year. It is believed no course of just this kind has ever been offered in any other institution.

SPREADING HAPPINESS.

Spreading happiness and good cheer in the world is certainly the duty of the florist, whether he lives in Kamchatka, Siberia or Larimore, N. D., and S. F. Mercer, who resides in the latter place, is one florist who lives up to the letter of his duty. But who would not be happy surrounded by such feminine pulchritude and by such a crop of Spencer sweet peas as are seen in the illustration on this page? Mr. Mercer adds to his business as seedsman and florist the duties of noxious weed commissioner and justice of the peace in Larimore.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Supplies have declined somewhat, except in the case of chrysanthemums. The demand has been fair; it is never brisk just before Thanksgiving. Prices showed a hardening tendency a day or two before Thanksgiving.

Chrysanthemums are looking the worse for wear; prices on these do not show much advance, but nice, fresh bronzes and yellows are in good demand. Whites go more slowly. Bonnaffon and Rager are still the leading varieties. An abundant supply of pompons and singles continues to come on, and prices on these remain about the same.

Roses are in shorter supply and prices have advanced. At present 9-inch Columbia and Premier bring $6 per hundred; reds, like Crusader, $8 to $10 per hundred, and whites $4 per hundred. Ophelia and Butterfly make from $4 per hundred upwards. The better grades make $12 and $16 per hundred. Carnations are improving, both in quality and prices; so are violets, which are now comparatively scarce here, as so many growers have dropped them.

A little stevia has appeared and there are a few Paper Whites. Callas are a little more plentiful, but lilies are few. Small lots only of snapdragons and marguerites are coming in, but calendulas are more plentiful; they sell well at an average of $4 per hundred. Sweet peas are of better quality.

Some good valley, locally grown, is now available. Cattleyas are still in fairly good supply; so are miscellaneous orchids. Gardenias are scarce, but a nice lot of bouvardia is coming in and it is soon bought up. Pot plant trade is getting brisker. While there are still some chrysanthemums, they are gradually passing. Cyclamens and begonias are abundant, as well as oranges and yellow and red solanums. There are also camellias, ericas, primulas and poinsettias.

Club Meeting.

Orchid night, inaugurated in 1921, attracted over 100 members to the club meeting at Horticultural hall November 21. A. K. Rogers moved that a ladies' night be held in January; this was unanimously approved. He also recommended holding a banquet in February, before Lent. Some discussion arose as to holding this at Horticultural hall or at a hotel; the latter was finally favored. Resolutions on the death of Herbert F. Calder were presented by Peter Fisher, chairman of the committee on resolutions, and adopted by a rising vote. Mr. Downs referred to the coming series of union agricultural meetings, in which the club would participate with some eighteen other organizations, and hoped members would furnish the usual good display of pot plants.

Exhibits were numerous and varied. James Donald showed twenty-eight varieties of single, pompon and anemone chrysanthemums, Carnation Laddie and splendid lettuces, awarded honorable mention. From E. F. Norberg, North Cambridge, came a good selection of commercial chrysanthemums; among the single-stemmed blooms, Thanksgiving Pink and Sunbeam, the latter similar to Bonnaffon, but later, were noteworthy. Alfred E. T. Rogers, Prides Crossing, had some fine seedlings from Mrs. Filkins; one, named Ruby, received a report of merit. He also showed Amaryllis anticum, which he grows in 16-inch tubs, rests in summer and flowers at this season in an ordinary greenhouse.

J. T. Butterworth, for a vigorous Cymbidium Schlegelii, received a cultural report of merit. For Epidendrum vitellinum autumnalis, well flowered, he received a report of merit, and for a grand Cypripedium Dreadnaught, a cultural report of merit. Donald McKenzie, Chestnut Hill, received a cultural report of superior merit for Brassocattleya Baroness, a report of merit for the fine hybrid Odontoglossum Wilsonii and honorable mention for Odontoglossum Adrianæ and O. Othello.

A number of queries from the question box were answered. One relating to camellias was answered by George Stewart, of Waltham, a noted camellia specialist. He said that, grown in peat, camellias made heavy leaf growth, but flowered poorly; a mixture of peat and loam gave best results. Lime must be avoided; Scotch soot and Clay's fertilizer prove excellent stimulants.

Nominations of officers for 1923 were as follows: President, Harold A. Ryan; vice-president, Walter H. Golby; treasurer, James Methven; secretary, W. N. Craig; executive committee, W. N. Judd, P. W. Burke, Irving Stewart, George W. Butterworth, George W. Homer, Donald Sutherland, P. J. Van Baarda, Gustave Thommen, E. F. Norberg and Herbert Baxendale.

Three new members were elected. Four interesting talks on orchids by Donald McKenzie, George W. M. Lydiard, George W. Butterworth and George I'Anson kept the meeting keenly interested and many questions were asked. Rising votes of thanks were tendered the several speakers.

Various Notes.

A contract has been let for the stalls in the new wholesale flower market on Tremont street. There will be two rows of stalls, about eight feet in length, running the entire length of the market, and much larger booths, with ice-boxes and offices, for the larger growers around the sides. From present indications, the market should be ready for occupancy January 1, 1923.

In the week of November 20 an advertisement, costing $75, placed by the Florists' Alliance, appeared once in several of the leading Boston dailies.

Wollrath & Sons, of Waltham, a few days ago sent their big delivery truck with a load of 600 cyclamens to Saranac Lake, a distance of over 300 miles from Boston. Snow and cold weather were encountered near Saranac. Four days were occupied going and returning. Ernest Wollrath had charge of the truck, and it is believed the journey was the longest one ever undertaken by any local firm over the road. There were no mishaps on the way.

At the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, December 19, officers for the ensuing year will be elected. Samuel Knowles will give the annual poultry lecture, his subject being "Incubation."

The trustees have decided to make all exhibitions of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society free to the public in 1923, including the spring and fall shows. There will be a grand spring exhibition April 5 to 8, and the same number of other shows as in 1922. Money premiums are more liberal than for the present year. In former years admission fees have always been charged at spring and fall exhibitions.

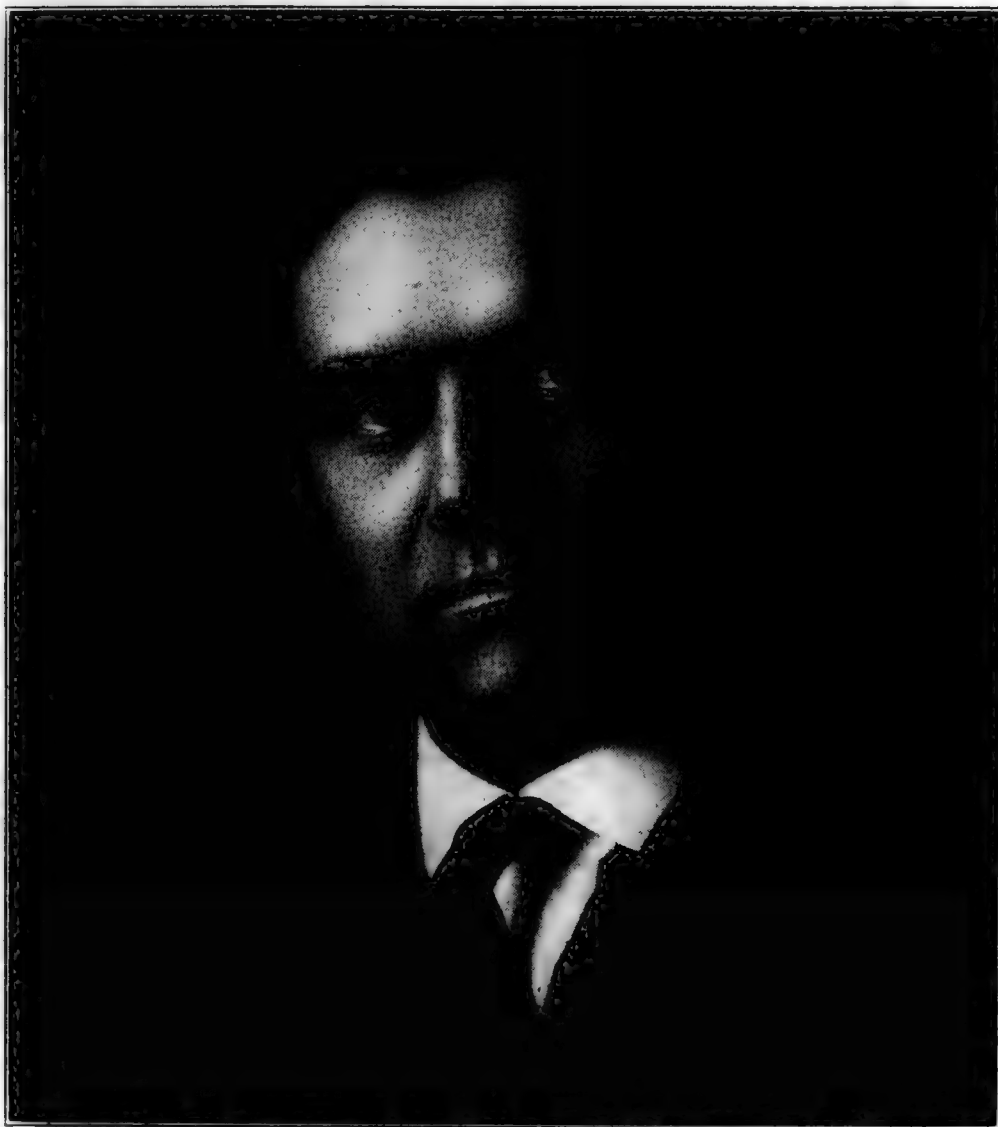

The Harvard-Yale football game at New Haven, November 25, boomed the sale of the crimson chrysanthemums, carnations and single violets. The discontinuing of football games between Harvard, Yale and Princeton, which is being much advocated, would affect retail flower trade a good deal.

At Penn's last week bowls of fancy fish, which occupied positions in one of the big windows, made a big hit. A considerable amount of business is being done in bulbs, both dry and in bowls. Many in the latter receptacles are now well in bloom.

Eric Anderson, of the Waban Conservatories, Natick, Mass., is sending in as fine a lot of Hadley roses as comes to this market. He is making full use of the 300,000 feet of glass and grows a considerable variety of stock.

We got our first bit of snow November 25, but still we can find many pompon chrysanthemums flowering outside.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE AND WHY

EDWARD J. LARSEN.

MANY who read in last week's Review of the change in name of Baur & Steinkamp to Baur-Steinkamp & Co. will recall, at sight of the above portrait, meeting the "Co." in the greenhouses of the firm, at Indianapolis. Many years ago A. F. J. Baur took into the employ of the old firm, Baur & Smith, a young man named Edward J. Larsen. He proved an apt pupil and in time became an invaluable assistant. Born in Indianapolis thirty-seven years ago, he had worked in the greenhouses which his father left, at his death while Edward was a child, to his mother and which she, a few years later, sold. His diligence in the interest of Baur & Steinkamp and his success with chrysanthemums, his hobby, led to his being given a share in the business when it was incorporated. The personnel of the partnership continues in the corporation, with these officers: President, A. F. J. Baur; vice-president, Edward J. Larsen; secretary-treasurer, O. E. Steinkamp. The breeding of carnations and mums will be the chief business of the firm, as in the past.

Thomas Roland will be able to start heating by oil at Nahant directly after the holidays; installation is now well under way.

The death of Mrs. A. F. Estabrook, of Boston, November 24, makes available a legacy of $50,000 left by A. F. Estabrook, former president of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, to that society, to be paid on the decease of his widow.

In connection with the Harvard-Yale football game played at New Haven, November 25, United States government agents guarded all roads leading into Connecticut and confiscated all chrysanthemums, unless accompanied by an inspection certificate. Trains and automobiles were searched by a small army of inspectors when crossing the state line, and all wearers of chrysanthemums were politely informed that, on account of the corn borer menace, they must surrender their flowers, unless they carried a certificate of inspection. Alternatives were a $500 fine or imprisonment. Inspectors visited the retailers and endeavored to simplify matters as much as possible. With few exceptions, wearers of crimson chrysanthemums took the necessary "hold-ups" in good part. Corn borers attack chrysanthemums, and all flowers leaving stores or markets and going outside the banned area must carry inspection tags. One or two shippers who have flouted these rules have been fined this fall.

Nominations of officers for 1923 were as follows: President, Harold A. Ryan; vice-president, Walter H. Golby; treasurer, James Methven; secretary, W. N. Craig; executive committee, W. N. Judd, P. W. Burke, Irving Stewart, George W. Butterworth, George W. Homer, Donald Sutherland, P. J. Van Baarda, Gustave Thommen, E. F. Norberg and Herbert Baxendale.

Three new members were elected. Four interesting talks on orchids by Donald McKenzie, George W. M. Lyddiard, George W. Butterworth and George I'Anson kept the meeting keenly interested and many questions were asked. Rising votes of thanks were tendered the several speakers.

Various Notes.

A contract has been let for the stalls in the new wholesale flower market on Tremont street. There will be two rows of stalls, about eight feet in length, running the entire length of the market, and much larger booths, with ice-boxes and offices, for the larger growers around the sides. From present indications, the market should be ready for occupancy January 1, 1923.

In the week of November 20 an advertisement, costing $75, placed by the Florists' Alliance, appeared once in several of the leading Boston dailies.

Wollrath & Sons, of Waltham, a few days ago sent their big delivery truck with a load of 600 cyclamens to Saranac Lake, a distance of over 300 miles from Boston. Snow and cold weather were encountered near Saranac. Four days were occupied going and returning. Ernest Wollrath had charge of the truck, and it is believed the journey was the longest one ever undertaken by any local firm over the road. There were no mishaps on the way.

At the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, December 19, officers for the ensuing year will be elected. Samuel Knowles will give the annual poultry lecture, his subject being "Incubation."

The trustees have decided to make all exhibitions of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society free to the public in 1923, including the spring and fall shows. There will be a grand spring exhibition April 5 to 8, and the same number of other shows as in 1922. Money premiums are more liberal than for the present year. In former years admission fees have always been charged at spring and fall exhibitions.

The Harvard-Yale football game at New Haven, November 25, boomed the sale of the crimson chrysanthemums, carnations and single violets. The discontinuing of football games between Harvard, Yale and Princeton, which is being much advocated, would affect retail flower trade a good deal.

At Penn's last week bowls of fancy fish, which occupied positions in one of the big windows, made a big hit. A considerable amount of business is being done in bulbs, both dry and in bowls. Many in the latter receptacles are now well in bloom.

Eric Anderson, of the Waban Conservatories, Natick, Mass., is sending in as fine a lot of Hadley roses as comes to this market. He is making full use of the 300,000 feet of glass and grows a considerable variety of stock.

We got our first bit of snow November 25, but still we can find many pompon chrysanthemums flowering outside.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE AND WHY

EDWARD J. LARSEN.

MANY who read in last week's Review of the change in name of Baur & Steinkamp to Baur-Steinkamp & Co. will recall, at sight of the above portrait, meeting the "Co." in the greenhouses of the firm, at Indianapolis. Many years ago A. F. J. Baur took into the employ of the old firm, Baur & Smith, a young man named Edward J. Larsen. He proved an apt pupil and in time became an invaluable assistant. Born in Indianapolis thirty-seven years ago, he had worked in the greenhouses which his father left, at his death while Edward was a child, to his mother and which she, a few years later, sold. His diligence in the interest of Baur & Steinkamp and his success with chrysanthemums, his hobby, led to his being given a share in the business when it was incorporated. The personnel of the partnership continues in the corporation, with these officers: President, A. F. J. Baur; vice-president, Edward J. Larsen; secretary-treasurer, O. E. Steinkamp. The breeding of carnations and mums will be the chief business of the firm, as in the past.

Thomas Roland will be able to start heating by oil at Nahant directly after the holidays; installation is now well under way.

The death of Mrs. A. F. Estabrook, of Boston, November 24, makes available a legacy of $50,000 left by A. F. Estabrook, former president of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, to that society, to be paid on the decease of his widow.

OBITUARY

Robert H. C. Bard.

Robert H. C. Bard, of Syracuse, N. Y., one of the most popular members of the trade in his state, died at his home November 24 after an illness of a week. He had suffered a stroke November 21 and his condition gradually grew worse.

Mr. Bard was born in England, but came to this country early in life. He went from Rochester to Syracuse thirty years ago to work as a grower for H. R. Quinlan. He later became a partner in the firm of Bard & Davis. After seventeen years the partnership was dissolved, and he started a retail store at 103 West Jefferson street, now conducted by Manager F. W. Bultman.

To all his friends he was known as "Bobby" Bard, and his popularity was great, both in his own city and in the trade at large. He was fond of fun, as is shown by the photograph of him on this page, taken on a trip to Florida two years ago and sent by him to his friends. He was active in local business and fraternal circles. He belonged to practically every Masonic body and also to the Eagles, Elks, Turners and Moose. He was a life member of the New York Florists' Club.

Mr. Bard was in good health until a week preceding his death. His wife, Mrs. Nettie Hudson Bard, and one son, George Bard, survive him. The business will be continued by Mrs. Bard.

Eugene J. G. Dailedouze.

Just exactly one month before Christmas, November 25, comes the sad tidings that Eugene J. G. Dailedouze, of Flatbush, Brooklyn, N. Y., has passed to his fathers. His death was caused by malignant cancer, an illness he had borne with great patience for sixteen months.

The deceased was born where he died, at Brooklyn, October 22, 1858. In 1862 Mr. Dailedouze moved to the location, at Troy and Lenox avenues, where his place of business was situated at the time of his death. The father of the deceased was engaged in the florists' and nursery business; in 1870, when the partnership under which the father operated was dissolved, Eugene Dailedouze was called upon to work with his father in the business, and two years after, his brothers, Paul and Henry, joined the business and worked in it until the death of their father in 1882. The mother of the boys carried on the business with them until 1892, when a partnership of the three brothers was formed. In 1907 Eugene Dailedouze bought the interests of Paul and Henry. This business was continued by Eugene Dailedouze, under the name of Dailedouze Bros., until the day of his death. The culture of the carnation has been the principal part of the business; the last variety to be disseminated from the establishment was Enchantress Supreme.

Eugene Dailedouze was a life member of the S. A. F., a life member of the American Carnation Society, a life member of the American Rose Society, a member of the New York Florists' Club and a member of the Chrysanthemum Society of America. For thirteen years he was chairman of the New York committee for examining seedlings and sports of the last-named organization.

Mr. Dailedouze was not content to be an inactive member of any organization to which he belonged. He acted as judge at many flower shows. He held numerous prominent offices, among them the presidency of the American Carnation Society. He was president of the New York Cut Flower Co. He is survived by his wife, a son, John; a brother, Henry, and two sisters. Funeral services were held at the residence November 27.

George A. Harrison.

George A. Harrison, a member of the firm of Harrison's Nurseries, Berlin, Md., died at the Presbyterian hospital, Philadelphia, Saturday, November 18. Mr. Harrison was born at Roxana, Del., 1870, and was the second son of the late Joseph G. Harrison, founder of the Harrison's Nurseries. Mr. Harrison was for more than thirty-five years associated with his brother, Senator Orlando Harrison, in the conduct of the business. Harrison's Nurseries are said to include 5,000 acres of land, with 100,000 bearing trees. The brother of the deceased will continue the business with his sons.

TORONTO, ONT.

Club Meeting.

There was a large turnout at the annual meeting of the Ontario Gardeners' and Florists' Association November 20. President F. D. Clark occupied the chair.

Plans were discussed to make the library more useful by the erection of proper facilities for housing the valuable books and periodicals in the meeting hall. A vote of thanks was tendered R. Heyward for his efforts during the year to make the library useful to the members and in reviewing all the periodicals and other literature each meeting.

Ernest Jones and William Beazer were proposed for membership.

P. L. Whytock gave a preliminary report on the Royal winter fair. There were more floral exhibits than space provided for them. W. T. Macoun, Ottawa, was appointed judge of flowers.

Prizes were awarded at each meeting for flowers exhibited. The exhibition at the annual meeting was an excellent one. For the year the first and second prizes for the highest aggregate number of points were awarded to R. E. Bessant and W. H. Izzard. T. Graham was given 8 points for a Cypripedium Hannibal; F. Perry was awarded 9 points for a Cypripedium Alethea and G. Thompson received 8 points for a Cypripedium insigne Sanderianum. The other exhibits were numerous and good, special reference being made to the big display staged by the Allen Gardens, but not for competition.

The retiring president, in his brief but important presidential address, recommended that the association support heartily the botanical garden scheme and the formation of the gardeners' section of the C. F. G. A., that a membership campaign be undertaken and that a sick committee be appointed.

The secretary gave a comprehensive review of the year's work, pointing out the many excellent addresses by such men as Professor Tomlinson, Professor Macoun, Professor Crow, W. E. Groves, Charles Chambers and W. J. Hill.

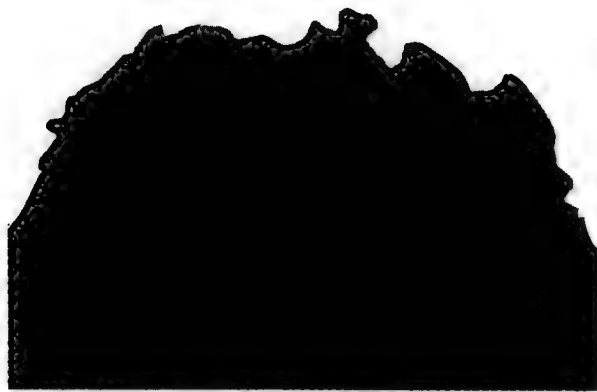

The following officers were elected: Honorary president, Charles Chambers, parks commissioner, Toronto; president, W. J. Porter; first vice-president, Sam McElroy; second vice-president, George Ridge; secretary-treasurer, Alexander Simpson; librarian, R. Heyward; editor, George Thompson; executive board, the above officers and P. L. Whytock, John Mills, W. Wadge, W. H. Saunders, Tom Smith, John Cripps and A. Dawson; sick committee, F. D. Clark, T. Graham and W. J. Potter; delegate to C. F. G. A. Windsor convention, Alex Simpson; delegates to Ontario Horticultural Society, F. D. Clark and Alex Simpson; auditors, W. H. Foord and J. Cripps; judges recommended for the Canadian national exhibition, Archie Walker, St. Anne de Bellevue, Que., and W. J. Hoath; judges for winter fair, 1923, E. F. Collins and James Mathews; representative to Royal winter fair board, Alex Simpson. The new officers addressed the meeting, promising interesting and educational meetings during the winter.

Royal Winter Fair.

The flower show in connection with the Royal winter fair being held in Toronto this week has been a great success, both in the number of exhibitors and in the number of people viewing the exhibits. There was a keen contest in all classes and 108 displays. There was also a great number of seed exhibits.

Port Chester, N. Y.—John Smith, who conducts a flower shop at 134 North Main street, is enlarging his business and will do landscape work in connection with his flower business. Mr. Smith has secured the services of Miss Dorothy Eastman, a graduate of the school of horticulture for women at Ambler, Pa., who has had extensive experience in the science of flowers. Miss Eastman is introducing the practice of accepting standing orders for flowers to be delivered weekly or at any other specified intervals.

Gentlemen:

Allow me the privilege of congratulating you on the splendid Autumn Number of The Review. The cover is beautiful and artistic, and the 192 pages an encyclopedia of valuable information for every reader and especially the buyer.

We seldom knock, but we are forced to use our little hammer at this time on a big bunch of advertisers who, we think, are doing The Review an injustice by not quoting prices in their ads, especially on seasonable bulbs.

Mr. Advertiser should not blame anyone but himself if he fails to get the best results from his ad. No florist or retailer has time to write for prices on Paper Whites at this time. Therefore, he sends his order direct to the advertiser who has the foresight to quote prices in his space.

Many sales, yes, many sales, are lost by firms who fail to quote prices at the opportune time.

WE CONSIDER THE REVIEW THE BEST ADVERTISING MEDIUM IN THE UNITED STATES FOR THOSE WHO WANT TO REACH THE FLORISTS and we have a big company of followers of the same belief. Touch 'em up, Mr. Editor, with a pertinent paragraph on "Results from ads with quotations and without."

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

BEFORE spring there will be a shortage of good Boston ferns.

DON'T expand too fast. Going beyond one's capital leads to difficulties.

A BIG business is a nice thing to have, but a better one is a business which owes nothing but the current month's bills.

CONSIDERABLE quantities of carnation plants are being benched following early mums, but many good plants will freeze in the field.

CHRISTMAS comes right on the heels of Thanksgiving this year. Unless you are well forward with your preparations, it is time to get busy.

COLLECTIONS are improving, but there are sections of the country where it will take some months of good business to enable florists to wipe their slates.

INQUIRIES should be signed with the full name and address of the subscriber in order to receive prompt attention. Anonymous communications go to the waste basket.

INDICATIONS all point to an excellent season's business in this trade. There still are localities where conditions are poor or worse, but on the whole the trade is in better shape than at any time in the last two years.

BOTH unusually good this year, box-wood and red berries will be worked up into hundreds of thousands of wreaths and baskets, which will be sold at Christmas to customers who demur at the necessary cost of cut flowers.

THE production of coal the week of November 18 hit a high mark for the season and preliminary figures for the following period indicate that still higher figures are in prospect following more rapid distribution and consequent better car supply. There is no longer fear of a fuel famine.

WHAT we need in this trade is a steady rise in dependability. There must be assurance as to the quality of the stock one will receive on an order and there must be assurance good stock will be paid for if shipped. The trade can be carried to a better plane of reliability if each day each of us does his part and asks that others do theirs.

THE spring trade will take at fair prices all the good plants we can get ready in time.

THE Wholesale Florists' Protective Association in New York city now has thirty-six members.

SPECIALISTS in flower seeds note an unusually strong call for petunia. Florists are preparing for the window-box and bedding season, for which the petunia is rising rapidly in popularity.

THE trade needs, most of all, to raise its standards of quality. "Good enough" is a poor rule. Would your stock, your packing, your attention to correspondence completely satisfy you if you were on the other end of the deal? That is the test.

THE Editor is pleased when readers send in photographs which they think may be of interest in these columns, but when they are sent rolled they can seldom be used, being crushed and cracked in the mail. Wrap them between heavy cardboards or enclose them in a special mailing envelope sold at stationery stores for photographs.

THE ambition to include in the forthcoming annual of the S. A. F. a complete and accurate horticultural census is a laudable one. Leaders in the trade have so frequently stated the reasons why such data are necessary that it behooves each member to send in the desired information concerning his own business, the assurance being given that it will only be used in compiling aggregates and averages.

MOST large establishments in this trade have been built up from one-man concerns and too frequently are still in the latter class. Put responsibility on your employees and divide among them the duties you now attend to personally. You'll still have to be on the job to see that things are done as you would do them—you will not be able to take in all the ball games or become a golf champion—but you'll have time to think and plan for the betterment and increase of your business.

SPENT A MILLION!

The national coffee roasters, at their convention at New Orleans last week, decided to continue their advertising campaign for at least two more years, and members were asked to subscribe to the fund. The per capita consumption of coffee has increased between twenty and thirty per cent and sales of coffee have increased approximately $70,000,000 in the last three years, in which more than $1,000,000 was spent in advertising, according to Ross Weir, chairman of the joint coffee trade publicity committee.

EXPRESS RATE HEARINGS.

Florists of the west and middle west will be given an opportunity to put their views of the express situation before officials of the interstate commerce commission during the winter, when examiners will be sent out to hold hearings in several large cities for the purpose of determining whether the present level of express charges is adequate.

Preliminary hearings on the subject were held in Washington last week, when officials of the railroads and of the American Railway Express Co. laid before the commission data to bolster their claim that express charges should be increased in order that the railroads might be adequately paid for carrying express matter. The actual application for permission to increase rates was filed by the American Railway Express Co., but it was developed at the hearings that any additional income derived thereby is to be turned over entirely to the railroads.

Although it was possible to reduce freight rates last summer, officials of the railroads and the American Railway Express Co. told the commission that the same facts do not apply to the express business. C. A. Lutz, vice-president of the American Railway Express Co., the principal witness, told the examiners that the government, during the period of federal control of the express business, incurred a loss of $70,000,000; during the calendar year 1921, he said, there was a deficit of $39,000,000, but, while it had been estimated that the operations for the current year would result in a loss of some $13,000,000, actual operations for the first six months of 1922 resulted in a net earning of $576,000. Because of the complaints of the railroads that they were not receiving sufficient remuneration for carrying express matter, he declared, his company paid the railroads $308,000 more than they were legally entitled to for that period.

Representatives of the florists and other users of the express service were not heard during the Washington hearings, but will be given an opportunity to present their side of the case during the series of regional hearings which are to be held during the winter. It is understood that the main plea of the shippers will be not for reduced rates, but for better, quicker service, and for nationally standardized rules providing for pick-up and delivery service in all cities. At present, some cities have this service, while others do not. The state railroad commissions, which have jurisdiction over express service, will be given a hearing in Washington, April 9; after this briefs will be filed and the situation studied by the commission, with a view to learning whether any relief can be afforded either the railroads or the shippers.

BIG BUSINESS.

From Little Liners Grows.

The Review now prints 13,400 copies of each issue. With such exceptionally large circulation it is natural that the paper penetrates to the innermost recesses of the trade, not to say the outermost outposts, and that advertisers whose offers are right may count with certainty on excellent returns. But sometimes the results of a little liner are far greater than anyone had reason to expect. It works like this:

Better not run our liner ad more than once until we see how we come out, as the first reply will take about all our stock if we can agree on prices. You will remember we thought we might use a page ad if we did not get the proper results with liners, but it looks as though the liners sell big lots as well as small lots of stock very quickly. We will have our own large stock of dahlias and gladioli to advertise, in addition to the special lot recently offered, but we question how many we should have if we want to run a page ad when a few liners bring calls for 200,000 or more.—E. T. Barnes, the National Show Gardens, Spencer, Ind., November 20, 1922.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising, you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The wholesale market last week was notable for the great improvement in quality, quantity and demand, with the anticipation of a busy Thanksgiving. Prices on all cut flowers are improving, and, as last week drew to a close, there was a brisk demand.

The market affords a splendid supply of late mums of fine quality. Among those noted were White Chadwick, Yellow Chadwick, Bonnaffon and Eaton. Pompons shared in the improved demand.

Roses are improving in quality, and the demand is strengthening, although last week it was necessary to adjust prices to clean up the demand. Carnations are holding their own in improved quality and demand. The supply is not overplentiful in the best grades of Enchantress. Nebraska and Betty Jane are in increased demand. Violets are scarce, as the weather has been too mild for them.

Cattleyas have been in good supply all season. Sweet peas are beginning to appear more and more each week, but the supply is not equal to the demand.

Easter lilies are plentiful. Not many Paper Whites are in. Stevia is fine, as well as mignonette and calendulas.

The greens market has an abundance of everything, and the daily demand is excellent.

Various Notes.

The St. Louis County Growers' Association will hold its monthly meeting December 6, at 8 p. m., in the Eleven Mile House. The recent flower show will come up for discussion and some other important questions. President Kirkwood expects a large attendance.

The officers of the St. Louis Florists' Club will have their monthly conference December 7, at the home of Treasurer W. C. Smith. An interesting program is planned for the club's meeting, December 14.

"A friend in need is a friend indeed." So the members of the George H. Pieser Wholesale Floral Co. felt last week, when the William C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. offered the former the use of half of the latter's salesroom in which to transact business, after the fire had destroyed the former firm's building, November 18.

The St. Louis Flower Growers' Publicity Association will meet December 5, at 1 p. m., at publicity headquarters; at this time the winter advertising campaign will be planned. All members are requested to be present.

The local members of the F. T. D. held a meeting last week at the Elks' Club. Vice-president F. C. Weber presided at the meeting, which was followed by a luncheon. As this association will hold its annual meeting here next October, monthly meetings will be held after the first of the year to prepare for the big meeting.

Andrew Benson, of the Premier Rose Gardens, Maywood, Ill., spent November 24 in the city, visiting growers and wholesalers. Mr. Benson will visit Pana, Ill., as a guest of Walter Amling, before returning home.

The Lady Florists' Home Circle was entertained by Mrs. George B. Windler, November 22, at her home on Delore street, and all enjoyed a most pleasant afternoon. Mrs. F. W. Bruenig will next entertain the ladies, December 13.

Theodore Horn, of Berning's, whose sudden illness, November 13, caused him to be rushed to the hospital for an operation, is out of danger, according to Mrs. Horn, but he will not be able to resume his duties before January 1.

The St. Louis Association of Gardeners will meet December 6, at 8 p. m., at the municipal greenhouses. Secretary Hugo Schaff says this will be the last meeting in the old year, and a good attendance is looked for.

W. A. Rowe and H. G. Berning were daily visitors at the St. Louis flower show office, assisting J. J. Beneke in winding up the affairs of the recent fall flower show. The executive committee will meet November 27 to prepare a report for the meeting of the club.

Nurserymen and landscape gardeners have much cause to celebrate Thanksgiving this year, as they are still shipping and planting. Frank Weber and L. Baumann say that there has never before been such a season, when business has been so rushing up to Thanksgiving.

The A. W. Gumz Wholesale Floral Co. reports that business is fine in all departments.

Excitement ran high at the bowling alleys November 22, when the Violets won all games from the leading Roses, while the Daisies and the Orchids won the odd game from the Sweet Peas and the Carnations. This makes a 3-cornered tie for first place, among the Roses, Daisies and Orchids. There will be no bowling Thanksgiving week.

The George Waldbart Floral Co. has some unusually fine window displays. After the holidays, this firm will begin work on the new store in the Metropolitan building, one door south of the present location.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

A drop in temperature to below the freezing point last week stiffened prices and improved the general tone of the market. While there were no large social events, a number of smaller ones combined with the few funerals to keep things moving. The opening of the new Biltmore market, with a large cut flower and plant department, gave a considerable impetus.

There has been an unusual abundance of mums during the last fortnight or three weeks, and prices have been the lowest that have been experienced in several years. Sprays wholesale at from 25 cents to $1.50, and large blooms at from $10 to $35 per hundred.

Ban Football Fans' Mums.

In anticipation of an extra demand for mums by both men and women going to the Yale-Harvard football game at New Haven or to the Brown-Dartmouth game at Boston Saturday, November 25, the local florists stocked heavily with blooms to retail at 20 to 75 cents each. Many found considerable difficulty in clearing them, because of the deterrent effect of newspaper articles stating that a quarantine ban had been placed on all mums going from Rhode Island into either Connecticut or Massachusetts. The following is a sample of these articles:

The showy chrysanthemum, favorite flower for the football games, will be worn at the Yale-Harvard game in New Haven or the Brown-Dartmouth game at Boston tomorrow only after inspection or as contraband.

The federal Department of Agriculture has imposed a ban on these blossoms because their stalks are carriers of the corn borer, and it was announced today that a corps of half a hundred federal inspectors at railroad terminals, on the trains, on automobile highways into Connecticut and Massachusetts, and at florists' shops in Boston, Providence and other centers would do everything possible to prevent the carrying of the flowers from the corn borer infested area, in which Providence and Boston are included, to the non-infested area, in which New Haven lies.

The inspectors have no powers of confiscation or search, but they will stop and question milady if she wears the big blossoms. To florists' shops whose flowers pass the inspection, permits will be given, to be passed along to the fair wearers. Unless a woman holds one of these, she will be asked to dispose of the chrysanthemums before she passes into Connecticut.

Various Notes.

Ed. Brooke, of T. J. Johnston & Co., was a visitor in Boston and vicinity the early part of last week.

Michele Iannotti is planning a complete reconstruction of his greenhouses on Harkness street next spring.

Joseph E. Koppelman made a business trip to New York and Philadelphia last week.

John Allen, of Fall River, was a business visitor last week, looking for supplies.

Daniel A. Clarke, of the Red Oaks Nurseries, at Fiskeville, has resigned as town treasurer of Scituate.

Edward Perry is doing duty as a petit juror in the Washington County Superior court.

The Market.

Business has been gradually accelerating to the level of a banner Thanksgiving trade. Starting with some rather slow days last week, demand increased steadily, so that Friday and Saturday were thoroughly satisfactory in every respect save prices, which, while fair, were not so good as growers say they need in view of the present cost of production.

At the beginning of the present week the market was in excellent shape and the indications were, when this issue of The Review went to press, that the Thanksgiving business will eclipse all previous records for volume and for money, although prices will not exceed, even if they equal, those of recent years. There is any amount of business if one will meet the buyers' views on prices. The retailers argue that the fowl on the table holds chief interest on the feast day and that people will expend only moderate sums for something of secondary importance, as they conceive flowers then to be. Consequently, the retailers want to pay only low prices, so they can, in turn, sell cheaply. The result is that the smaller grades of flowers have been wholesaling this week better than the large, long, fancy grades; the retailers would like the better stock, but want to put second-grade prices on it. Of course in some cases they succeed, which does not help any in making the average the growers consider necessary.

There is an abundant supply of chrysanthemums this week, much better than a year ago. Then, even though Thanksgiving was a week earlier, mums were nearly gone. Growers planted more of the late varieties this year and this, combined with recent good weather, has resulted in the best Thanksgiving supply in many years. What holds true of the single-stem mums also applies to bunch mums and to disbudded anemone-flowered varieties, of which Sunshine is the most popular. Because of the larger supply, prices are not so high as last Thanksgiving, but are fair.

Roses are just between crops. The autumn cut is off and the Christmas crop has not started, so roses occupy second place this Thanksgiving. There are enough roses for all who are willing to pay from 15 cents up, but of the grades ordinarily sold at this season for from 6 cents to 12 cents there are not enough to meet the demand. The result is that, as usual, the buyer with the long purse gets the most for his money. It is especially difficult to get good prices for the longer grades of Butterfly, Sunburst and white.

Carnations turned scarce last week and prices advanced unexpectedly, evidently the result of holding back for Thanksgiving, as the opposite tendency now is apparent.

Good sweet peas are excellent property; the supply is not large and the call for corsage flowers centers there. Violets are not an important item on this market this season and few are offered for Thanksgiving. Cattleyas are equal to the special demands. Valley is in customary supply. The range in lilies includes giganteums, callas, rubrums and auratums. Paper Whites are offered in all the wholesale houses, but the high price necessitated by the cost of the bulbs makes the limited supply more than equal to the demand. A few Soleil d'Or are seen. Stevia has come, both local and from the Pacific coast. Pussy willows also are here.

There has begun to be an active demand for helichrysums, boxwood and red berries, indicating the approach of Christmas.

New-crop bronze galax has arrived, about three weeks earlier than usual this year.

At the moment the fern market is quiet, but nobody ever knew them to be $4 at Thanksgiving before.

December 7, Mark it Down.

Every member of the trade within reach of Chicago should reserve December 7 for a visit to Morton Grove, when the Chicago Florists' Club will hold there the third of its series of highly successful field days. Everybody is in-

There will be a flower show and everybody is urged to bring anything he cares to put up for trade inspection. A good day is expected to bring out an attendance of at least 500. The afternoon is to be devoted to the inspection of the several ranges of the Pochlmann Bros. Supper will be served at the celebrated Lincoln Inn and will be followed by the regular December meeting of the Florists' Club. It will be election night and, to increase interest, efforts are being made to stimulate a good-natured contest among the friends of the excellent candidates nominated at the Maywood meeting, who are as follows:

For president, C. J. Michelsen and A. T. Pyfer.

For vice-president, August Lange.

For secretary, F. Lautenschlager.

For treasurer, A. H. Schneider and Rudolph Ellsworth.

For trustee for three years, William Collatz and Joseph Kohout.

Various Notes.

When George V. Wienhoeber visited the market November 25 in mood more than usually jovial, inquiry developed that the reason lay in the arrival that morning of a strong baby boy at the Wienhoeber home on Winthrop avenue. There are four girls in the family.

A new flower store is being opened by Schneider & Green in connection with an undertaking establishment at 912 Irving Park boulevard. It is a double store, with the undertaking establishment on one side and the flower store on the other. The fixtures have been installed by Buchbinder Bros.

Guy W. French is on the Pacific coast again, visiting the trade all the way from San Diego to Portland, where he was when he received the news that his house, the A. B. C., is ready to go ahead with its plans for a New York store.

A new Buick coupe is the latest addition to W. J. Smyth's string of automobiles. He now has five. Two are trucks and two others touring cars. The big Pierce-Arrow will be laid up for the winter, while the coupe is used by Mr. Smyth in his daily trips to and from the store and about the city.

That business is better than usual at this season of the year is the report of Edwin Mallinson, manager of the Fleischman Floral Co., and yet Mr. Mallinson says he bought his Thanksgiving flowers cheaper than last year. He uses nothing but the better grades.

At the newly decorated and remodeled store and conservatory of John M. Weiland, 5315 West Madison street, a formal opening is being held the last three days of this week. This establishment formerly was the Globe Greenhouses. Mr. Weiland has installed a complete new outfit of Buchbinder store fixtures.

After the St. Louis show "Bill" Jacob made a trip into his old stamping ground, Texas.

With his right forearm still in a dressing, P. J. Foley is released from the care of his physician after a narrow escape from serious consequences. Assisting in finishing the new factory in Forest Park, his arm was badly scratched by the end of a rusted wire and blood poisoning resulted. For a few days there was very real danger, now happily passed.

The latest converts to the Scottish pastime are A. L. Randall and F. M. Johnson, to whom A. M. Anderson and Eric Johnson have communicated their enthusiasm. Mr. Randall and Mr. Johnson have joined the Briargate Club, where John Ziska has been upholding the golfing reputation of the trade this season.

The A. B. C. this week is delivering the last shipment of Lilium giganteum, this lot consisting of 695 cases, a good portion in large sizes and all mountain grown. This company is receiving many congratulations from friends in the trade in connection with the announcement of the New York branch visit to Richmond, Dayton and Cincinnati, Paul R. Klingsporn says he found the trade in optimistic mood in all those cities. There is confidence of a good season's business.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. are preparing to handle holly in quantity this Christmas. Their advices are that the holly will be good and cheaper than in recent years.

Visitors.

Among the week-end visitors was our former fellow townsman, M. S. Smith, now secretary and manager of the Oshkosh Seed Co., Oshkosh, Wis.

Miss Kate Harris, of Irby & Harris, proprietors of the Flower Shop, at Memphis, spent the week-end here, buying Thanksgiving and Christmas supplies and visiting friends.

Alois Frey arrived from California, November 27, on his annual trip. He scarcely classes as a visitor, however, as he retains his interest at Crown Point, Ind., where the same high-grade carnations and anemone-flowered mums are being produced for this market as were grown when Mr. Frey gave them personal attention. In a few weeks the colored freesias will be coming in.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Market.

Stock was in fair supply for Thanksgiving. There was less than the usual early holiday cut of mums, as they had been coming in so well for the last three or four weeks. Local orders of large proportions were placed early. The rose market is rather light. Carnations are more plentiful than they were and the quality is improving.

Various Notes.

A meeting of the growers and commission men was held Friday, November 24, in the office of the Stuppy Supply Co. This meeting was held to decide on the percentage the growers are willing to pay to the publicity fund of the Florists' Club and the percentage they will pay in for cooperative advertising in the trade papers. T. J. Noll was chosen to preside as chairman and Glenn K. Parker as secretary and treasurer. The result of the meeting will be presented at the next general meeting of the club, December 15.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Archias, of Sedalia, Mo., were in the city Saturday, November 25, on their return from a three months' visit in California.

Mrs. Ray Holt, of the Kirkwood Floral Co., Des Moines, Ia., and Mrs. King, of Burlington, Kan., were recent visitors.

Dr. B. W. Murphy, of St. Joseph, Mo., was in the city Tuesday, November 21. M. E. Carter, manager of the W. L.

Rock Flower Co., and Glenn K. Parker, manager of the Stuppy Supply Co., were workers on the annual drive for the local charities the week of November 20. More than $800,000 was raised in the six days for the various charities of the city.

Mrs. John Murray, of the W. L. Rock Flower Co., left for California November 29.

The William A. Miller Floral Co. had the decorations for the Dickey-Sharp wedding, November 22. It was the most elaborate wedding seen here in many years. The Walter Dickey home is one of the finest in the city and lends itself admirably to decorations on a lavish scale. On the altar, which was built in the living room, where the marriage ceremony took place, were 600 long-stemmed Columbia roses, with a background of palms and ferns. There were garlands of roses on two tall electroliers on either side of the altar. At the foot of the stairway on the main floor was a 5-foot vase of 150 long-stemmed American Beauties. A shower of 150 chrysanthemums was on the landing above the stairway. Large vases of chrysanthemums and roses stood on the floor in the rooms on the second floor. Two cake tables, beautifully decorated, were in the dining room on the third floor. One table held the bride's cake. This was decorated with Premier roses, valley, sweet peas and a silver vase of cattleyas in the center. The other table, from which guests were served, held Columbia roses, sweet peas and smilax. Besides these flowers, more than 500 Cecile Brunner roses, quantities of woodwardia and other greens were used.

Rock Flower Co., made the bouquets for the Dickey-Sharp wedding. The bride's bouquet was of white orchids and valley, with a cluster of Cecile Brunner roses and edged with white ostrich plumes and a shower of ivory velvet. The colonial bouquet carried by the maid of honor was of Ophelia roses, light blue delphinium, edged with peach-colored snapdragon, with a silver shower. The five bridesmaids carried bouquets of roses, greens and lavender orchids and camellias. The bouquets corresponded with the shades of their gowns, which were of pastel shades.

The Troost Avenue Flower Shop has announced the opening of its new store, at 4244 Troost avenue, which took place Wednesday, November 15. FILL PRACTICALLY ALL ORDERS

Within the last few years there have been built in Kansas City, Missouri, thousands of feet of glass which is daily producing some of the best commercial flowers grown anywhere. These flowers are offered to the trade throughout Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas, Nebraska, Iowa and other states by the four wholesalers whose names appear on these pages.

There was a time when Kansas City could not supply this territory with flowers. Not so now.

Some of the best flowers offered to the trade are produced for this market and in quantities that will insure the filling of all orders.

Those who are shipping flowers out of distant markets should try Kansas City and the change will prove profitable.

proving, and it is believed that the midsummer and fall slump is over. Florists are making steady preparations for the holiday trade, which looms up bigger than ever before. The increase in volume is attributed to the general improvement in business conditions, which has been quite marked in Columbus.

Roses, carnations, chrysanthemums and violets are the best features. Roses are rather scarce and there is no over-supply on the market. The varieties most in demand are Columbia, Premier, Crusader and Butterfly. Carnations are coming in fairly well, with prices between $1.50 and $2 per dozen. Violets are selling better as the season advances, with corsages the best feature.

Pot plants move briskly, with cyclamens and primroses the best. Begonias are in fair demand.

Funeral work has been rather active. Weddings have been fairly numerous for the time of the year.

Club Meeting.

The Columbus Flower Growers' and Dealers' Association held its usual semimonthly meeting at the place of Carl Huber, on Lockbourne road, November 21, with an exceptionally large attendance. Advertising for Christmas trade was the principal topic of discussion. Coöperative advertising was carried on last holiday season with marked success, and as a result it was decided to carry on the advertising campaign this year in the same manner.

It is planned to spend in the neighborhood of $500 for this campaign and a committee, consisting of Walter Stephens, of S. F. Stephens & Son; Ralph Munk, of the Munk Floral Co., and William Metzmaier, of Emil Metzmaier, was named to arrange a plan to be presented at the next meeting. This meeting will take place December 5, at the plant of S. F. Stephens & Son, Greenlawn cemetery. All members were enthusiastic about the coöperative plan of advertising and they have pledged their support.

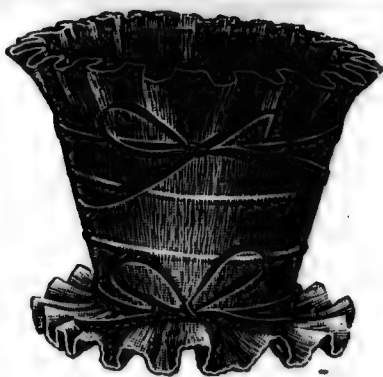

The bulb question was discussed, but no action was taken. Reports of cut prices on Holland bulbs, especially narcissi, were received, but dealers who had purchased earlier in the season claim that they will clean up in good shape.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Julia McGannon, proprietor of Julia's Flower Shoppe, at 107 South Third street, states that the sale of pompons has excelled that of chrysanthemums. Funerals have been playing a big part in the business of this shop.

Four thousand pieces of art pottery have just been received by the Wilson Seed & Floral Co. These are to be sold at from 10 cents to $5 each as novelties. A sale of this kind is conducted annually. Violets and straw corsages are now selling well. Mr. Wilson is contemplating putting an elevator in the building and erecting a greenhouse on the roof. The house will be about 30x70. Sand piles will always be in the corners of this greenhouse, where children may play while their mothers are shopping.

Orders have been flowing in regularly to the Franklin Park Floral Co., especially in chrysanthemums, roses, pompons and pot plants. A new 75-horsepower boiler is about to be installed in the greenhouse.

Prices have been reduced on all Ever Ready Pot Covers

According to E. R. Munk, manager of the Munk Floral Co., the firm plans to erect a new boiler room, about 30x45, at its greenhouse, on West King avenue.

By undertaking a two years' special course in horticulture and floriculture at Ohio State University, Miss Cochstudents sent to Ohio State University by the United States veterans' bureau.

Weeds, thistles, lotus, milkweed pods and different grasses and foliage make up a new line of wreaths just received by Max T. Zahn, manager of the Gay Street Floral Co., to be used as Christmas novelties. These wreaths are already selling.

William Underwood, manager of Underwood Bros., says that the prices on all flowers are somewhat lower this year, especially on mums, as they are smaller, due to the warm weather that has been predominating until the last week. Roses are selling well at present, although they are rather short.

Carnations are selling better this year than ever before, and cyclamens are also expected to sell well, according to J. Dozer, formerly of the Fifth Avenue Floral Co. and now foreman of the greenhouse of this company.

James McKellar is now recovering from a week's illness at his home, where he has been afflicted with neuralgia. He expects to be at his place of business, 35 West Broad street, within a week.

"General business is good, although funerals are taking the lead, and we are certainly getting our share of it," says E. R. Munk, manager of the Munk Floral Co. A good many bouquets and loose flowers are being sold for wedding occasions here. M. K.

The Market.

Last week activities at the wholesale houses showed that the holiday period was at hand. Shipments of boxwood sprays, natural lycopodium, southern smilax, red berries, arbor-vitæ sprays and some mistletoe were all to be seen. The supply of roses last week was hardly sufficient to take care of the demand. The varieties received were White Ophelia, White Angelus, Richmond, Crusader, Premier, Columbia, Ward and Sweetheart. The demand for American Beauty was fair and the supply limited. Mums and pompons are the predominating flowers. Some fine specimens of mums are in the market now and the demand has been reasonably good; also pompons have been coming along in splendid varieties and moving out rapidly. The demand for carnations is again increasing rapidly, and the supply is just about equal to the demand. The stems are beginning to get longer, although there are still some short-stemmed carnations on the market. Yellow daisies have made their entry, as well as calendulas and sweet peas. The usual demand for greens, such as Sprenger, plumosus, string smilax, ferns and coontie leaves, still prevails. Bronze galax is now one of the new features in the market this year.

Florists Hold Banquet.

About 200 florists, representing eleven different florists' and horticultural societies, attended a banquet at the Fort Pitt hotel Thursday evening, November 23. Mr. Harper, of the A. W. Smith Co., presided over the meeting, while Mr. Berger, of the McCallum Co., led the audience in singing old-time songs. An orchestra also rendered selections during the banquet. After the banquet, Mr. Dykes, an alumnus of State College, was introduced as toastmaster and, after commenting on the object of this meeting, he introduced Dr. R. C. Watts, of the school of agriculture at State College, who told the florists what this college was doing in the way of agricultural advancement. Professor S. W. Fletcher, horticulturist, then spoke on the wonderful service State College has been rendering to the Fruit Growers' Association, and brought out emphatically the opportunities that the florists were missing in not calling on State College for more assistance. An explanation was then made that from 1,000 to 1,200 men and women were being turned away from State College annually, due to lack of accommodations; however, at the present time, they are in hopes that the state legislature will grant additional equipment to handle the increasing demand at this college, but they find that, should the state grant their request, they would not be able to accommodate the students in the way of homes. It was learned that the Potato Growers' Association had pledged itself to $100,000, which would build a dormitory in memory of that organization, and the speakers impressed upon the audience that it would be well if such a dormitory could be offered by the florists and horticulturists of the state of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Byers, one of the active treasurers of State College, then commented upon the conditions prevailing at that institution and, after some discussion, gave the audience an opportunity of subscribing to this worthy cause. A large number of the florists announced their subscriptions, and it is understood that another group will send in their subscriptions after they have had an opportunity to think it over. The meeting was a great success and it is hoped that the florists and horticulturists will take a part in this great undertaking, which will mean considerable to the growth of the florists' business.

A beautiful Thanksgiving folder, announcing fruit and flowers for Thanksgiving, is being mailed by the McClements Co. to its customers.

Frank J. Zak, one of the leading north side florists, has been confined to his home for a week with pneumonia. It is understood, however, that he is improving.

The E. A. Williams Co. and the Randolph & McClements Co. are mailing monthly editions of a "Say It with Flowers" magazine to their customers.

Every pedestrian on Penn avenue makes comment on the wonderful display of flowers in the window of the E. A. Williams Co. A beautiful decoration in small pompons and chrysanthemums is to be seen. H. J. H.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The cut flower market, always difficult of description, is more difficult than usual this week. The situation, stated tersely, is this: The market is better for good flowers. Cool, snappy weather has helped the carnations wonderfully; they are finer, they keep better, the buyers want them. Prices have advanced. The surplus of colored carnations has disappeared; they are selling with the others, at a slightly lower price.

Chrysanthemums continue in demand at fair, not fancy, prices. The prospects are that they will decrease in number after Thanksgiving. The flowers that reach the market in good condition sell, but those poorly grown, small or bruised are sacrificed. No one wants them unless they are cheap.

Pompons are selling rather better than they did. Christmas Gold has come ahead of time; it is prized for its daintiness and for its rich color. Sweet peas are not much sought, but violets are more popular. Now, more than at any other time this season, orchids are scarce and extremely high in price. There are good cypripediums.

Roses are improving, notably Columbia, now as fine as at any time in its history. American Legion is the leading red rose; it is exceedingly decorative.

The leading stores in the center of the city were busy, extremely so as the week drew to a close. The large majority of the local stores were not busy; in fact, they found business dull. This explains why so many flowers were left over in the wholesale houses.

The growers thought that the Army-Navy football game would create a demand for chrysanthemums that would cause prices to advance. It did create a demand, but nothing like enough to affect the general market. There were a few good sales, but prices generally did not advance. They declined slightly, partly because quality is lower with those varieties that are nearly over.

The Army-Navy Game.

The annual football contest between the cadets from West Point, N. Y., and the midshipmen from Annapolis, Md., was waged in the new stadium of the University of Pennsylvania, Franklin field, Saturday afternoon, November 25. A crowd of over 50,000 people, includ-

The P. H. S.

The November meeting of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was held at 606 Finance building, Tuesday afternoon, November 21. A general discussion of the fall show brought out these facts: The attendance was satisfactory. Interest in anemone, single and pompon chrysanthemums is much greater than in the large-flowered Japanese type. The Academy of Music is not favored by the exhibitors, although the public goes to a good show when held there.

The executive council will decide, probably December 20, on the plans for 1923.

Show Notes.

There were several errors that crept into the description of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society's exceedingly successful show, held at the Academy of Music, November 7. Edward Towill, of Roslyn, did not exhibit American Legion. They were good enough to have been his, but they were not. They were shown by a private gardener who is a great admirer of Mr. Towill and of his American Legion. The miniature gardens disappeared, in name at least, so completely as to make them scarcely recognizable. By the way, Charles Willing, who won first prize for his miniature garden last year, was a judge at this show. The last correction is in the name of John Kuhn, of Olney, whose name was somehow slightly disfigured in the rush that always marks these great affairs.

The Strafford Flower Farm.

It is said that Billy Moore goes out to Strafford Sundays, just to get the air. When he gets out there, however, he goes flying around picking out this and that order for chrysanthemums or pompons in a way that suggests a breeze at Strafford. It is pretty exciting out there just now, with a tremendously heavy November cut and the building and what not, but there are a few moments of calm, sufficient for these too brief notes.

Whittier is highly esteemed as a rival of Bonnaillon; not so easy to grow, but apparently worth the extra effort. Thanksgiving Pink is admired for its size of flower, texture and vigor of growth, but the color leaves something to be desired. The latest and probably the last batch of cold storage lilies is coming on extremely well, giving promise of good winter flowers.

The carnations have bloomed earlier, more profusely and say more about what they are going to do this year than they did last; they were pinched only two weeks earlier this season. Laddie looks especially well. Maine Sunshine is highly prized. White Benora is considered promising. A new greenhouse, 40x125, had the concrete walls completed in one day. It is filled with French hydrangeas. Another greenhouse, the same size—both are of Lord & Burnham material—will be, barring accidents, completed December 15. A tractor has just finished the grading.

A Bad Decision.

An out-of-town exhibitor entered flowers in a New York show this month. Two of the classes in which he entered called for eighteen blooms each of a named variety. He inadvertently staged seventeen blooms in one vase and nineteen in the other. The judges attached a blue ribbon to his exhibit. When they had done so, another exhibitor who was standing near asked them to count the flowers in these two exhibits. They did so, and disqualified both exhibits on the ground that neither of them contained eighteen flowers, the number called for in the schedule.

This was a stupid decision, which interpreted the letter and not the spirit of the law. A flower show is not a mathematical contest. It is a contest for supremacy in cultural skill. The judges had admitted that these two exhibits were the best in their classes. In the case of the seventeen, the exhibitor should have been given the opportunity of adding one of the extra flowers that he had in his box. In the case of the nineteen, one flower should have been laid on the table. The rule is intended not as a trap, but to make a standard that will simplify judging. Unless an exhibitor is known to be tricky, he should never be disqualified for a slight error in count. The exhibitor should have the benefit of the doubt.

Azaleas at Easter.

When the much-discussed quarantine prevented our cousin Belgians from sending over those plant gems in the leading varieties of Azalea indica, both they and we were hard hit. What were we to do for our azaleas at Easter? We turned to our Japanese friend, Hinodigiri, for relief. This sterling scarlet variety did much for us, aided mightily by the enterprise of our own nurserymen, but we lack variety in color. We heard much of the wonderful Kurume azaleas that had been shown in Boston, with their wide range of color, and we were pretty much making up our minds that, between the French hydrangeas and the Kurume azaleas, we should get along quite comfortably at Easter, when, lo and behold, a change comes over the scene!

The Indian azaleas have reappeared in our midst, coming not from the east, westward, as formerly, but from the west, eastward. In short, they have come from California and they are right here now and will be seen again, D. V., in our market next Easter—Madame Van der Cruyssen and all her brothers and sisters and cousins that we once loved so well. Just what effect these California-grown Indian azaleas will have on the now powerful contingent of French hydrangeas remains to be seen. Probably there is plenty of room for both, but, unless our leading men are greatly mistaken, the Kurume type of azaleas will be seen elsewhere than in our greenhouses before Easter and even dear little Hinodigiri will find that early forcing is better than competing with its Indian cousins from California at Easter.

HEADQUARTERS FOR XMAS GREENS

Boxwood Sprays

Boxwood is today the classic decorative material for all occasions.

We, of the present generation, are studying for unique decorations and are always looking for something new — there is nothing new under the sun — we just reflect back to the description of those old colonists whose holiday festivities were most unique, especially at Thanksgiving and "Ye Auld Yule Tide."

Garlands of boxwood sprays and fruits intermingled were used. Wreaths for the doors and windows were made of boxwood sprays interwoven with holly, bayberries and bittersweet.

We ship anywhere in the United States and Canada.

A few pounds of our sprays will make a good-sized wreath.

All good, clean, merchantable fancy tips.

We are ready to make delivery now or at any date desired.

Place your order today and be assured of good, merchantable stock.

Price, per 100 lbs.....$22.50. Price on larger quantities on application.

Mistletoe

Of course nobody, particularly the florists and young folks, wants to miss MISTLETOE for Christmas. Last year we were compelled to decline some late orders. Your orders will be greatly appreciated. Our Mistletoe is of prime quality, especially selected stock from Southern Mexico. Bright, healthy, glistening berries with clean, bright foliage.

It will facilitate matters greatly at this time if you will get your orders to us AT ONCE. Please bear in mind that we are obliged to fully book our purchases by December 1st.

Price, per pound.....25c. Put up in 10 and 25-lb. corrugated cartons.

The Market.

The market is still dull, although it is slightly more active than last week. There are few florists who are satisfied with the way business has been breaking for them this month.

Various Notes.

Victor A. Lemieux, who recently purchased the store of Edward Gernaey, on St. Catherine street east, has secured the flower stand at the Mount Royal hotel, which is to be opened December 20. Mr. Lemieux has contracted to supply all the decorations to be used in the hotel.

William C. Hall and Gus Choquet attended the royal winter fair at Toronto last week. Mr. Hall received first prize for the best group of cyclamens.

Robert P. Holmes, of the Mount Bruno Floral Co., and E. H. Skinner, of the Montreal Floral Exchange, visited the Boston wholesale markets last week. They also visited the Montgomery Rose Gardens, at Hadley Mass., where they looked over the new rose Commonwealth. E. H. S.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

The Market.

Last week stock was plentiful one day and scarce the next, so that it was impossible to figure just where one stood from day to day. The last of the week found stock scarce, with the result that wholesale houses closed Saturday night, November 25, with empty iceboxes and a few unfilled orders on hand.

Mums were scarce all last week, with good, large stock at a premium. Smaller varieties were more plentiful, but cleaned out readily at fair prices. Most growers held back their best stock to catch the Thanksgiving season.

Good roses are scarce and there is always a scramble for this stock as each shipment arrives. Premier roses are showing real midseason quality and are getting better in color each day. Ophelia, Butterfly and Milady are also fine, while Double White Killarney and Angelus are of poor quality and find little sale. Most growers ascribe the poor quality of all white roses to the dark weather. Fine Sweetheart roses arrive daily, with a demand equal to the supply.

Valley is to be had every day and, although the supply is somewhat limited, it requires considerable effort to keep it cleaned out. Orchids have now diminished to such an extent that a sufficient quantity cannot be obtained to fill orders. Sweet peas are increasing in quantity slowly and the quality and size of bloom are all that one could ask for at this time of the year.

Carnations have shortened in supply to such an extent that the demand far exceeds the receipts, with the result that a firm, steady market is maintained. Laddies are still fairly plentiful and some of the finest blooms of the season are arriving each day. Paper Whites are to be had in limited quantities, but the market on these is not right and they do not clear to much advantage. Lilies and callas are to be had in limited quantities and there is little call for them, due to the fact that

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

POINSETTIAS AT HOLLYWOOD.

The accompanying illustration shows that there are other big business affairs in Hollywood besides the moving picture industry. For many years the late A. Ecke, father of Paul Ecke, had grown poinsettias for the market and had constantly added to his acreage. The present owner has also kept going ahead, until now some fifteen acres are devoted to their culture. Mr. Ecke's cut flower business starts in November, keeps on all through the winter and spring and when it lets up he is ready to go on with stock plants. In all, some 250,000 plants are grown, and all in the field shown in the illustration will probably be lifted for stock plant purposes. These are shipped during the season to every state in the union, as well as to Canada and the West Indies. Cut flowers are shipped with success to middle west points and practically all over the western country and the south. There are several varieties grown, each having its own individual characteristics, but the two most in demand are the early and late reds, the latter an immense, well colored variety, the former good, but slightly smaller. A true pink, too, is pretty and of distinct character, so much so that a good demand is springing up for it. There is also a white and a double form, but the large, deep red Christmas variety still has the greatest call. The present season has been extremely satisfactory, no high winds or heavy rains having occurred to damage flowers and foliage, and so there is every prospect of an exceptionally good season. Mr. Ecke says that the demand is already good and increasing daily.

BROWN BROS. & CO. CELEBRATE.

Founder's Golden Wedding.

The Vancouver Sunday Sun, November 19, carried the portraits of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Brown, who November 16 celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding, at the home of their son, Edward Brown, 300 Twenty-first avenue, east, Vancouver, B. C. Mr. and Mrs. Brown were the recipients of many gifts, among them a purse of gold from members of the family and a gold-mounted fountain pen and a gold-mounted umbrella from the employees of Brown Bros. & Co., Ltd., which Mr. Brown founded.

The firm of Brown Bros. & Co., Ltd., is one of Vancouver's largest industries and ranks high in size among the horticultural establishments on the continent, having a total of sixty-seven acres under cultivation and using over 300,000 feet of glass. The usual number of employees is about eighty-five, and the annual pay roll amounts to about $97,000.

The founder of the firm, Joseph Brown, Sr., has had a lifelong experience in the business, as in 1871, at the age of 19, he was in charge of his father's nursery business at Deal, Kent, Part of Paul Ecke's Fifteen Acres of Poinsettias at Hollywood, Cal.

England. In 1880, a depression in England started him to the new world. He arrived in Chicago in that year, the following year moving to southern Wisconsin; in 1887 he arrived in Winnipeg, Manitoba; but after a sojourn there of eleven years he became dissatisfied with the rigorous climatic conditions, and in 1898 he removed to Vancouver, B. C., immediately starting the business which has now grown into the present well known firm.

Rise of the Firm.

Two blocks of land were purchased, from which dense trees had to be cleared. In their place now stands one of the most modern and complete ranges of greenhouses in existence, with a garage, machine shop, wirework factory and 115,000 feet of glass.

In 1909 this range was found to be too small to meet the demand for flowers; so forty-two acres were purchased at Port Hammond, B. C., where there is now a range of greenhouses with 185,000 feet of glass. The remainder of the land is planted with every kind of high-grade nursery stock adapted to the climate of British Columbia. This end of the business has grown to such an extent that the firm this year leased the C. P. R. Gardens, at Kerrisdale, near Vancouver, comprising twenty acres, to augment the supply of small fruit and ornamental plants, and outdoor flowers such as gladioli, violets, etc.

A large shipping trade has been built up, going north to the Yukon, south to Washington and east to Manitoba. For a number of years a large successional planting of palm seeds has been made, and the firm will shortly be in a position to supply the palms needed in Canada. Several florists from the western states, when in Vancouver, have wished to purchase these and other plants, but the United States regulations at present make it almost impossible for this class of goods to cross the international boundary.

Experiments are under way which it is hoped will end in successful competition with the bulb growers of Holland for the Canadian trade in their specialties. At present slightly over 1,000,000 bulbs, mostly of the narcissus family, are planted out in the nursery grounds at Hammond.

Two Retail Stores.

At present two retail stores are rented by the firm in Vancouver, but, since the firm was unable to secure satisfactory leases, the Brown block, on Granville street, with a frontage of forty feet, in the center of the best downtown shopping district, was purchased this year, and when the necessary alterations are completed, the firm will move into an attractive and modern retail store of its own, with a valuation of $150,000, including the land and building.

This is strictly a family business, as associated with Joseph Brown, Sr., are his two sons, Edward, general manager, and Joseph F., in charge of the plant at Hammond, while the founder of the firm takes a fatherly interest in all branches of the work.

AND EVERYTHING OF THE BEST IN SEASON

GEO. J. HALL & CO., WHOLESALE FLORISTS 423 E. Fifth St., Los Angeles, Calif.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

An average demand and shortage of flowers have made every day a clean-up day, while on several occasions, when large funerals have occurred, there has been a wild scramble for stock. Everything of any consequence has sold and much more could have been handled.

Mums are still holding up well, and there is a good stock of pompons, but dahlias are rapidly passing. Roses and carnations are clearing well and other stock is about as last reported. The various holiday greens are making their appearance.

Various Notes.

George F. Otto, of San Diego, visited the city last week, driving up with his son and a party of friends. They visited the nursery sections, including Sawtelle and Montebello. Mr. Otto was showing photographs of his new store, a fine building.

Walter Armacost & Co. are receiving another large consignment of the famous Mas-Art baskets and are re-shipping them almost as fast as they arrive. A "basket drive" is the way Mr. Williamson describes it. The plant business at the Sawtelle greenhouses is of immense proportion.

Fine mums, roses and violets are the leaders now at the place of S. Murata & Co.

Ritto & Hansen, of Sawtelle, have secured another two acres for cut flowers. Seen at the market, J. Hansen said they would probably go into the culture of outdoor carnations.

At Hermosa Beach one day last week Miss Vetter had over forty pieces for one funeral. This lady is to be heartily congratulated on the way she has worked up an excellent business from exceedingly small beginnings.

A. Tassano & Son were the first in the market with California holly and desert holly, each being of the best of its kind. Shipping has already commenced.

At the store of the E. C. Amling Co. fine stevia is being handled, this being the product of E. C. Amling's nursery at Sawtelle. The building secured by this firm at 737 to 739 Wall street is finely fitted for the purpose of a wholesale store. It is, roughly, 40x125 feet, with a lofty ceiling that will allow for a good mezzanine floor all around. It is not far from the new Japanese market, the building for which is going up rapidly. Mr. Amling says they had no difficulty at all in releasing their present building at 447 Wall street.

Ernst Amling, of Santa Ana, is expected back from Chicago before Thanksgiving. Mr. Amling went there to be present at his brother's wedding.

The new store building at the Superior Dahlia Gardens is beginning to take shape and will be a fine addition. Large electrically lighted signs will be on the roof and the whole front will be open by day and closed by night with French windows. Like everything that C. Gutting does, this will be of the best procurable. A new lath house is also planned.

F. Westrem, of Westrem-Garland Florists, had a unique table decoration last week. Large bowls of fish in colored water, electrically lighted, were placed at suitable points, with flowers and moss below. Rock candy was well distributed over the table and various character were used.

For the funeral of a well-known society woman killed here in an automobile accident, Frank Lichtenberg had an extra large amount of funeral work, including a wonderful blanket of valley and orchids. H. R. R.

The Market.

The weather last week continued mild, with sunny days and considerable fog at night. This was excellent for violets, which were in prime condition, though the real violet season seldom begins till after Thanksgiving. The effects of the previous cold weather were seen in the big chrysanthemums, which were about done, as far as shipping was concerned. There were a number of big chrysanthemums in the market, but they were, for the most part, tion till Thanksgiving, especially if the weather held out. Roses were not too plentiful, though good-sized crops of good roses were being cut by some of the growers. Carnations were coming in pretty well and some of them were of good varieties. The only real carnation shortage was in red blooms, which were much in demand for the annual football game. The summer stock was about gone, with the exception of marigolds. Some of the red holiday berries, the Toyon berries, were in the market, ahead of the holiday season, but not in any great quantities. There were plenty of cyclamens, especially potted, and celosia was not over.

Strawflowers were still coming green to market. Gardenias were fairly plentiful, and orchids were becoming more in evidence.

Various Notes.

When the McLaughlin Flower Shop put its Thanksgiving football display in the window, a week before the big game between the University of California and Stanford University, so many people coming from the Orpheum and other theaters stopped to look that things looked like a riot for a few minutes. A big placard, shaped to resemble a football, was draped with the cardinal of Stanford and the blue and gold of the University of California. "Now is the time to order your corsage for the Big Game," the placard read. Corsages displayed consisted of a big white chrysanthemum, encircled with red carnations, the mum bearing a big "S" in red, and of a gold-colored mum, bearing a big "C," the mum being surrounded with violets. The window showed how a real news value can be attached to flowers.

back for nearly a month, but he will be able to leave the hospital earlier than that.

E. W. McLellan, of the E. W. McLellan Co., is calling on the trade in Portland, Ore.

L. H. Archias, of Sedalia, Mo., is here with his family, in the course of a pleasant trip. Mr. Archias drove up from Imperial valley, where he visited his brother. The Archias family has often visited California. They look on the trip as a winter pastime.

Guy W. French, of the American Bulb Co., Chicago, has spent the past week here.

The death of Congressman John I. Nolan kept many of the local florists extremely busy November 21 and 22, the latter date being that of the funeral. Pelicano, Rossi & Co. had an especially large number of wreaths and offerings. Podesta & Baldocchi, Shellgrain & Ritter and other stores also had numerous orders for the funeral.

Adrian J. Schoorl is preparing to issue a new catalogue. It will cover seeds from practically all over the world, as Mr. Schoorl believes in getting his seeds from the countries where the soil and climate are best fitted for their development. Business, according to Mr. Schoorl, is quite good. All his stock of Holland and native-grown bulbs will be sold out before Christmas, according to present indications. The California bulbs include ranunculi, baby gladioli and Paper White narcissi.

The E. W. McLellan Co. is having fine cuts of roses from its houses. A great many Hadley went like hot cakes during the week preceding Thanksgiving, as partisans of Stanford were showing their football favorite beforehand, by wearing red roses. Manager P. Mortensen says that the large cuts of gardenias go as fast as they come in.

J. A. Axell is taking his violets from thirty growers. He has been sending violets as far as New York and, from all accounts, they are arriving on the Atlantic seaboard in excellent condition. The fact that this fall has not been too dry has greatly helped the violet crop. The Peninsula Nurseries are supplying Mr. Axell with good crops of Laddie carnations and with the yellow variety, Maine Sunshine, as well embowered in flowers. Favors were tiny Chinese bird cages, with sprays of pansies.

Podesta & Baldocchi had three wagon-loads of flowers and offerings for the coming out party of Miss Armsby, at the Burlingame Country Club. One of their decorations for the event was a huge basket of grapes, with fifty dozen gardenias arranged among the grapes.

One week before Thanksgiving, F. C. Jaeger & Son, with the entire staff, took a "Jaeger" night at the Orpheum. The idea was to promote a friendly spirit among members of the Jaeger force.

Albert O. Stein has been busy with decorations. For a big wedding at the Palace hotel, November 26, the ball room, concert room and corridor were all transformed by flowers. At a dinner dance for 170 people December 2, Mr. Stein will cover the tables with various colors of organdie, over the white cloths. Flowers and berries to harmonize with these colors will be used.

Gen. A. J. Gooch has planted a great many of the cape jasmines sent from Texas by Mrs. Darbee, at his place at Burlingame. He is also experimenting with imported strawflower seeds, grown under glass.

The Suzanne Floral Co. had a good many Thanksgiving orders for cafe table decorations. This firm makes a specialty of cafe work and has many friends among the restaurant men.

Allen Beall, of Seattle, was a recent caller at Darbee's. He has taken the McCoy Flower Shop, Seattle.

Frank A. Clark is doing well with the Blossom Shop, 1605 Haight street. He is an active worker and has many friends in the trade, as well as among the residents of the district where his business is located. M. M.

The Market.

With a cold wave prevailing for the last three days and a heavy east wind blowing, the florists have been obliged to pile on the fuel in large quantities day and night. However, stock is coming along in good shape. Cyclamens look promising, as do the poinsettias. Several growers report a good crop of carnations for the Christmas trade. Chrysanthemums are dominating the market and good stock cleans up daily. Some fine Maud Dean are to be seen here, but Major Bonaffon, Rager, Chieftain and Turner, together with the standard varieties of pompons, are gain-

The Market.

Chrysanthemums are still the main factor in the market. Seidewitz, Celebration, Lynnwood Hall, Thanksgiving Pink, Autoerat and the Chadwick varieties are popular.

The rose market is shorter and will continue to be so until later, as this stock has been pinched back for Christmas. At present, roses are selling for $4 to $20 per hundred.

Carnations are scarce; there are barely enough to go around. The quality has greatly improved and available stock sells readily for $3 to $6 per hundred.

Sweet peas are plentiful. A few violets and some splendid calendulas are in the market. Mignonette, orchids and valley are on hand. Stevia is a new-comer.

Various Notes.

The Bertermann Bros. Co. has an attractive Thanksgiving window, featuring large turkeys and, of course, plants and flowers.

Oscar Carlstedt and Herman Junge recently made a trip to Richmond, Ind.

WREATH TO HONOR CHILD.

When the Roxana Oil Co., of Ardmore, Okla., placed an order with Melvin D. Augspurger, of Montpelier, Ind., for a large and beautiful wreath to do honor at the funeral of a 2-year-old child, Mr. Augspurger and his competent staff, with accustomed confidence, tackled the job and did it to the satisfaction of all concerned, as is evidenced by the illustration on this page.

This was an unusual wreath for the firm, in that it stood forty-two inches over all, the largest Mr. Augspurger has made since being at Montpelier. Gracefulness characterizes the piece, as well as the fact that everything in it suggests poise and balance. The wing-like flying effect is produced by the dove, with wings extended at the top and the eucalyptus leaves in wing-like position at the bottom. The lilies used give lightness to the heavier arrangement of roses and the carnations and daisies inserted here and there furnish variety. It is a wreath for youth and, surely, appropriate for the occasion of its making.

HOW FLORISTS SELL GOLDFISH.

Handle High-Grade Stock.

"I do not know of a better channel for the cream of the goldfish and aquarium supply business than through high-grade florists. I will except the limited number of well run pet stores and the exceedingly few department stores having aquarium departments. Aside from these, the flower stores are the natural outlet for profitable business."

This statement, coming from a man who knows the inside of the goldfish business from experience, led to the development of an interesting picture of the goldfish business. It will be interesting to florists, also, because all the possibilities are not yet realized. This man, in his connection with one of the best known goldfish and aquarium supply houses in the country, had kept his finger on the pulse of distribution of millions of fish. These had gone to all sorts of dealers—florists, seedsmen, department stores, variety stores, druggists, pet stores, and so on.

Drug Store's Day Is Past.

In an earlier day, a great many goldfish were sold to the public through drug stores. A few are still. But they were introduced through the drug stores as a novelty—to induce people to visit the stores. In most cases they were used as a premium. A sale was held on a certain day, when, with each dollar or 50-cent purchase, a globe and small fish were given.

Consequently, there was a time when goldfish were associated with drug stores in the minds of a large part of the buying public. But that day has passed. There is a necessity for care and maintenance in handling goldfish that many druggists do not want—considering the fact that their trade called for the cheaper kinds of fish and supplies. Another consideration is the direction that drug-store merchandising has taken. There is a great tendency toward packaged goods, which can be stored compactly, handed out quickly and the demand for which is created by national advertising. Goldfish cannot be handed out, ready-wrapped, like a package of cigarettes or razor blades.

Therefore, with the failure of the drug stores, generally speaking, to handle goldfish regularly, there arose the need of some other channel for "sampling" the public and getting them started to keeping goldfish. This need was supplied by the rapid development of the chains of 5 and 10-cent stores.

"Feeders" for Florists.

You can go into one of the well known syndicate 5 and 10-cent stores and for a dime buy a small package of almost any well known shaving soap, tooth paste or other toilet article. This is the method of "sampling" that pays the manufacturer. A small package is used and eventually the user gets into the habit of going to the drug store for the full-sized package.

Goldfish sold in 5 and 10-cent stores give women "samples" of the pleasure of keeping an aquarium. This "sampling" educates them and eventually they want the higher-priced outfit and the larger, stronger fish which a florist can best supply.

The chain stores are selling immense quantities of small fish every year. But they are not competitors of the florists. They are feeders for the florists' trade. In fact, the florist should consider a long time before he attempts to sell fish of small size and the accompanying accessories.

The Right Globe.

In the first place, the florist wants—or should want—to sell fish that live. Most persons will tell you that they are not able to keep their fish. This is not always because the fish they have bought are not healthy—hatchery, wholesaler and retailer may have been perfectly honest.

The trouble is most often in the globe. This trouble was made apparent most clearly in a chart made by the zoölogy class of the Bowen high school, in Chicago, and approved by the Chicago Aquarium Society. There has been so much interest in goldfish generally that the young students set out to answer a common question, "Why can't I keep goldfish?" On their chart the globular form of aquarium is branded as "criminal." The cylinder is called "satisfactory." The oblong all-glass or glass-and-metal aquarium is declared "ideal." In explanation of these verdicts is the single sentence: "Figure the air surface in square inches!"

That is why the small globes are not conducive to the welfare of the fish. Constant attention to replenishing the water supply, so as to give a new oxygen-supply, is needed. This attention is given until the novelty of having the fish wears off. It is overlooked and the fish simply perishes. Then again, several fish are crowded into one of these little globes. Result, not enough oxygen, and they die. At one time pint globes were popular. Even half-pints were sold! Try now to buy pint globes from a reputable supply house!

Successful Policy.

All this points the way to the policy followed by florists who are successfully selling goldfish. They do these things:

Sell the largest-sized globes, 2 and 3-gallon, or aquariums of sufficient size that with ordinary care the fish thrive.

Sell the larger fish and give caution about not overcrowding.

Give helpful information about feeding, about water plants and about other accessories, and create a regular business in supplies.

This does not seem like an intricate policy and it is not. It is simply avoiding the trifling sales that are liable to cause complaints. It enables florists to handle transactions of sufficient size that they can be well paid for the time they take in giving attention to the customer while making selections. It enables the florist to sell outfits with as reasonable assurance of satisfaction as the customer can expect. People expect the best from a high-grade florist and are willing to pay for it, within reason.

"When I first put in goldfish and aquaria," said a florist on the west side in Chicago, "I had an idea that I could pay my rent in that way. But the business just naturally grew and it is making me a good profit."

He was, at the time, assembling an outfit for a gift. A man had come in and left instructions to select an assortment worth $15. There is a surprising number of blanket sales like this. People do not know values in goldfish and supplies. Therefore, they are willing to leave it to the dealer to make up the outfit for them. This is where a florist with a high standing in the neighborhood has a distinct advantage.

A young man came into the reception room with a large package and a tin bucket with holes in the top. The package contained an aquarium about two and one-half feet long. Goldfish were in the pail.

As he set it up on the center table of the reception room, a few questions elicited the information that he was connected with a wholesale goldfish and aquarium supply house. His little girl had been in the hospital for an operation. The exceptional kindness of the doctor had so impressed her that she wanted to make him a present, especially after the doctor had told her he liked goldfish. One of the women waiting made inquiries of the man, that indicated the sale of a similar outfit, and the girl at the reception desk ordered a cheaper outfit for her mother.

The young man further revealed the fact that a great many physicians and dentists purchase aquarium outfits for their reception rooms. They find it profitable. The graceful movements of the little fish helped the time to pass more rapidly for their waiting patients. Besides, the goldfish have a soothing effect upon the nerves—they are shipped in quantities to insane hospitals and private sanitariums—and the patients were in better shape for their ordeals.

But none of these outfits were sold through the florists, although the young man admitted his firm sold to a great many florists. The business came direct to the retail department. One doctor had installed one and told another about it.

Schools, too, are frequent purchasers. This is a direct channel to the home. One retailer in Chicago made a discount to a third-grade class that wanted an outfit badly, and he included as a gift an extra fish. To his surprise, he received a big bundle of letters one day. As an exercise in English composition, the teacher had instructed the pupils to write a letter to the retailer, thanking him for the extra fish and giving their opinions of the outfit and the pleasure they expected to have from it.

Those children automatically became advertisers for that retailer. Wouldn't it have been the same if he had been a florist? And the dealer's name and address had been learned. Certainly the youngsters spoke of the goldfish at home.

Another field which could be developed by florists is the supplying of outfits for rest rooms in factories and offices where girls are employed, notably in large mail-order houses. Such an outfit is a good investment for the firm;

it is an efficiency measure. The beneficial effect of watching goldfish is accepted.

With these users—physicians, dentists, schools, factory and office rest rooms—all meaning a widening circle of interested persons, the florist has an opportunity to make himself better known as a flower merchant as well as a dealer in goldfish, and the while increase his profits. There are probably neighborhood opportunities yet undiscovered, too. H. D. K.

ARRANGING SHOW WINDOW.

What would be the best color for the woodwork in a flower shop? Would you paint a rose arbor the same color as the rest of the woodwork? What kind of lighting will be best? I mean style of fixtures. The window is to have red tile in the bottom and the base on the outside green glazed brick. I want to raise the tile about two inches around the edge, so that I can put moss in the window, and water. This will keep the plants fresh. I also will have a drain installed. I saw this watering plan in a shop in Mattoon, Ill.
Will have twenty feet of mirror-backed shelving in room. Any information you can give me on the way a flower shop should be arranged will be much appreciated. C. E. H.—Ill.

A rose arbor in any color but white will look unnatural.

If you want advice on the style of lighting to use, you will have to give a description of the store, the height of the windows and the width of the street, so one may judge the influence of the buildings opposite. As to shape, etc., you would better inquire of a local man who is experienced in this kind of work.

If you have not yet started your window, do not raise the tile on the edge, for the following reasons:

If you put moss in the window so that the plants will not dry up so much, or so that you will not have to water the plants so often, you will find this is little saving of time and does not counterbalance the damage done to the plants when they stand on the wet moss. They get sour in a short time and get a bad odor. In a busy season, if you take one or another plant out, the place looks like a neglected back yard. Have the window one color, flat, of glazed green tiles. If you use plants in your window and do not want to trim the pots, use them in their plain, clean, natural color with a saucer underneath. They look prettier and better so than with poor trimming. A window perfectly flat, even with the glazed green tile, will give you a chance to change your display with little labor. To clean out the wet moss is so much work that you or your men will put it off from day to day and sometimes will not

You state that your shop does an approximate business of $5,000 per year. We will approximate that and say an average of $400 a month. Now, then, we take the summer months—June, July, August and September—in which we would figure only one-half of a regular month's business. That would give us a surplus of $800. We take the last spring month, May, and the first fall month, October, in which we also will not do a full volume of business, but possibly $300. That would increase the surplus $200 and bring it up to $1,000. This $1,000 would have to be divided between the Christmas and Easter months, so that in Christmas month and Easter month, instead of $400, business would amount about to $900.

Now, you have to figure that if you do $1,000 business and your overhead is about fifty per cent, the stock you should buy would amount to approximately $350. On this basis you can figure out just how much you need.

For Christmas the first year you will have to take a little chance, and you will have to consider the average of your sales. For instance, from the size of your business, I should guess that your average sale would amount to $4. Most of your sales are, in consequence, $3; so I would prepare for about forty per cent $3 sales, thirty-five per cent $4 sales and twenty per cent $5 sales. On the five per cent above that, I should take a chance, and prepare for a few sales at $7.50, $10 and $15, and possibly one piece for $25. The few larger pieces I should use as a window decoration, to show those customers who go to a new store to purchase their smaller items and to another shop for their larger items, that you are able to take care of their larger orders as well as their small ones.

If stock in your part of the country is plentiful, you would do best to call on your grower and on your wholesaler, state the matter plainly to them, ask for their advice and ask the grower's support in creating larger and more sales. If, as I mentioned, stock is plentiful this Christmas, your grower will be willing to give you a certain amount of foliage plants, taking a chance himself in order to boost your sales, because in so doing he is boosting himself. Naturally, in future you have to stick to the man who stuck to you. He will give you his advice in the selection of plants, so that what you may have left over from Christmas you may be able to use for New Year's. Mix among your flowering plants pandanus, well colored dracenas and other well keeping plants useful for the house. If you think you have too much stock in flowering plants, try to sell them first, and when you run short on flowering plants on the last day, offer customers the foliage plants. If you have been only a short time in business, you have had absolutely no chance to judge your yearly business, having started in a quiet season. You will not be able to say what your yearly average will be until you go through November; then only you can determine how much stock you can use for Christmas. It is not too late to purchase your stock after December 1. Max Sehling.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

The establishment known as the Park Place Greenhouses, Ballston Spa, N. Y., is now owned by Carl K. Petersen, a graduate of commercial houses on both European and American continents, the last position which he held being that of superintendent of the R. C. Macy estate, Long Island. The new place was well stocked with Bonnaffon mums for the Thanksgiving trade. Carnations Belle Washburn, Matchless and Enchantress Supreme, together with Cleveland cherries for holiday sales, are also in abundance at this store. Funeral work is encouraging. John C. Robinson, the former owner of the place, plans to locate in California, in order to cure himself of the hay fever. The local chamber of commerce gave our worthy confrere a grand send-off at its meeting November 23.

estate, Ballston Spa, N. Y., finds an improved local retail demand, warranting the growing of more variety and less quantity, and advances the opinion that if more of the owners of small places in small towns would pursue this course of action and rely on the nearby market for the larger supply, it would aid in general expansion.

"A fine experience," observed Henry Schrade, Jr., of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., referring to the meeting of the F. T. D. at Baltimore recently. "The remarkable thing about the meeting was that the folks at home had read the account as given in The Review before we visitors had an opportunity to tell of the good time given us by the people of the convention city."

A. J. Watkins & Son, Hudson Falls, N. Y., are enjoying a busy season. Thanksgiving looms up better than ever before here, both in the demand for stock and the supply on hand or in prospect. There are plenty of fine mums, roses and carnations to be seen here. Funeral work has been plentiful and called for several large pieces.

J. W. H. Grupe, Schenectady, N. Y., is among the optimists who predicted a banner Thanksgiving business, and he was fortunate in having plenty of good stock with which to meet the demand.

out of the trade with some choice cuts of venison, the fruits of a recent hunting trip made by himself. The cuts of meat sent to the hospital were accompanied by flowers. It is needless to say that this was a splendid piece of publicity.

Christian Dehn, of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., had a fine crop of mums and carnations for the Thanksgiving trade. Preparations are now in progress for the bedding and other spring stock for next season.

The John Ralph estate, Saratoga Springs, N. Y., acknowledged as being among the best growers of Lilium giganteum in this vicinity, will be well to the fore in the business. Mrs. Ralph reports business as excellent at this time.

"More room must be made to meet the demands of an increasing business," is the report of A. J. Binley, Glens Falls, N. Y. "We are crowded for space and cannot do justice to our patrons with our present equipment, which will be good news for the greenhouse builders," continued he.

with a private family whose property adjoined the barracks of the French colored soldiers. I might here say I stayed with private families, rather than at hotels, whenever I could, as I could, in this way, get closer to the people. This family, of course, did not like the idea of colored soldiers among them or rather over them, but told me that they kept entirely to themselves and that they had no complaint to make on the soldiers' conduct whatever. This is contrary to what we have been hearing. In central Germany, many people told me of the "black horror of the Rhine," but when I told them my experience they generally admitted that they had only read it in the paper and that's all they knew about it.

At Remagen on the Rhine I was told of American soldiers tearing up pieces of paper and scattering them on the streets, then compelling citizens, even old women, to pick them up at the point of the bayonet. It was hard to believe, but, on my return to this country, I questioned one of our old employees who had been stationed at this town, and he confirmed the truth of the statement. Of course, the Germans now have no animosity against the Americans whatever and explained that the soldiers came into the town thinking they had real "Huns" to deal with and took these occasions to demonstrate who was master and to command obedience. In this town they told me of an old lady shopkeeper who thought the American soldiers were monsters because they came in and asked her for "matches," which she mistook for "mädchens" or, in English, "girls." This old lady now thinks there are no better people than the doughboys, as do the rest of the citizens.

"Valuta," the Talk.
The big question in Germany today is "valuta." You hear it in the restaurants, theaters, street cars, the street and everywhere. The expression refers, of course, to the value of the mark in comparison with foreign currency. A man from a country having a high value currency is a "valuta" man and is accordingly held in disfavor. The average citizen thinks he is in Germany as a vulture would be, eating up food needed by the German people, because of his ill gotten wealth, which was probably wrung out of Germany, either directly or indirectly. Hollanders are especially obnoxious, as they really are overrunning the country, buying up everything in sight, because it is cheaper than in Holland. Many stores will not sell to foreigners at all and several times I was turned down for this reason. Prices of necessities are going up at a pace so much faster than wages that I predict there will be another revolution there this winter, and not one that will be over with in a day, either. The workman cannot tell just what he hopes to accomplish this way, but he figures that if he kills off the capitalists and profiteers, things will be better, somehow or other.

It is a common sight to see parades of communists, headed by a red flag, marching on the main streets. Hamburg has one of the finest city halls in Europe, but there is not a square yard of the walls that does not show the effects of light artillery fire during the last revolution, and in a Dortmund hotel where I stopped are dozens of empty picture frames still hanging on the walls, with a placard announcing that the painting itself was stolen by the revolutionists in 1918.

I found that business men want the monarchy back, but a great majority of the workmen want the republic. The business man says the German people are not suited for a republic, and that the country can never amount to anything as long as that form of government exists. I should say that about one-half of the business men want the Kaiser himself back on the job. In the Rhine section the old monarchy flag of black, white and red is still popular, but in Hamburg, Berlin and such places, you can display only the white, red and gold flag of the republic without getting into trouble. President Ebert does not suit any faction, but, as he says nothing, all parties put up with him until they can put their own man across. The monarchists especially dislike him, and a favorite joke you hear everywhere to show his unfitness is this: He entertained the American ambassador on one occasion, when Ebert drank light beer, or "hell," as the Germans say, and the American drank dark beer, or "dunkle," as it is in German. Soon the American raised his glass and said, "To your health," and Ebert, thinking he said, "To your hell," replied, in turn, "To your dunkle."

Press Not Free.

The present government is suspending unfriendly newspapers almost as freely as the old regime. As socialists control the government and the government owns the railroads, they passed a law that no railroad employee can be dismissed for any cause without the consent of the union. This government also ended unemployment by compelling every employer of labor to increase his force by ten per cent, whether he needed them or not, and, of course, the 8-hour day rules for the first time in the history of Germany. All the employers complain that the efficiency of the workman is less than fifty per cent of what it was before the war.

A German woman told me of being in Paris when the war broke. Of course, she left immediately, having her baggage, consisting of fourteen trunks and containing valuable family heirlooms, go at the same time. She never received the trunks, as the French sold them at auction, but when she said that she could not blame them, as her own countrymen started it by selling the French citizens' baggage, I could hardly believe my ears; to hear a German exonerate a Frenchman is something unusual indeed.

"The flight of the mark" simply turned things topsy-turvy while I was in Germany. When I entered, the dollar bought 600 marks and kept on until it got to 2,500, when it receded to around 1,200, but it is now hanging around 4,000. The older Germans cannot accustom themselves to its new value. They always think of the pre-war value when buying anything and, invariably, they will comment on the fact that it cost only so many before the war. As the price of the dollar governs everything, they are naturally interested more in how the dollar stands than anything else. Other foreign currency is bought and sold, but only the dollar is mentioned. Workmen going along the street will seldom pass a bank bulletin as to how the dollar stands. If it goes up he promptly notifies his employer that his wages must be increased so much by Saturday. The storekeeper also promptly raises the price of all his merchandise, although at first most of the storekeepers did not raise their prices to correspond, thus enabling "valuta" men to buy things in Germany cheaply; in fact, often the retail price was much lower than the wholesale.

Gradually the merchants began to take advantage of the situation, until today prices are not nearly so cheap as formerly, in spite of the last drop of the mark. I just happened to be there during this transformation period; it will probably never occur again. To one who stops to consider that the government is printing 5,000,000,000 paper marks daily, with no gold back of it, it is inevitable that it must soon reach the vanishing point, but the people seemed to have a stubborn idea that it would not go any lower, and for a time the dollar did fall almost daily, but, as nearly as I could see, it was because the printers went on strike for four weeks and thus the law of supply and demand caused the mark to strengthen.

Wages in Germany.

The workman is not so badly off; his union simply says the pay must be that much higher, but for the salaried man or one depending on a fixed income, it is hard; in fact, they are not making a living wage, but are barely existing, eating practically no fats and buying few, if any, clothes. Before the war, an industrious man could probably save 10,000 marks for his old age, which meant he was about as well off as a man over here with $10,000. Today that man still has his 10,000 marks, but they are worth about $2.50, which will keep him a few weeks at most. Here are a few examples of the wages of some of my acquaintances: A Berlin public school teacher, speaking English and French, 80 cents per month; a head bookkeeper in a small office, $2.40 per month; an editor of a printers' trade journal, $6.40 per month, although printers under him make twice that amount; a stenographer, $1.20 per month. Often I was asked how much a servant girl earned in America, and when I told the amount in marks that equaled $9 per week, they would say to one another, "Listen, listen! A maid earns 10,000 marks a week! Did you ever hear of such a thing?" And often they would tell me not to repeat the figure before their servants. In spite of the fact that marks are so cheap, they became so scarce in September that they could not be obtained in ordinary channels. You could visit every bank in town and not be able to get $5 changed into marks. One day in Dresden I was in the largest bank and noticed two girls who looked like Americans and who seemed to be in trouble. Questioning them, I found they were Americans who had a $50 American bill that they could not get changed anywhere and they could not get out of town until they did. They were nearly frantic, as they spoke little German. It so happened that I had come into the bank to buy a draft of 200,000 marks to pay for some goods I had bought and, as on such occasions I had always made it a practice to get at least $10 worth of marks, I told them that possibly I could help them out, as banks are anxious to sell drafts for dollars. I finally "jewed" the cashier up from 1,200 to 1,375 for a dollar and got him to give the girls several certified checks for their $50 and got $10 worth of assorted certified checks, marks, and some new money, just issued by the Republic of Saxony, for myself. We had a hard time getting rid of the certified checks, but the people finally took them and the new Saxon money caused all kinds of comments, as it was the first seen.

Getting Marks Difficult.

In Hamburg I had a $2,000 transaction and got my man to go with me to the bank, where he was well known to the vice-president, whom we called on to put through the deal. My friend explained that out of it I wanted $20 worth of marks in cash. First he said, "Impossible!" but finally, after much arguing on the part of my friend, he said he might give me $10 worth and went to see. He soon returned and told us to follow him back of the clerks, where he left us and returned with the $10 worth, all in 20-mark notes. He asked me to count it out and put it in my pocket before I left, as he didn't want anyone to see that I got it there. In doing so, it took up the entire capacity of both my trouser pockets and my outside coat pockets.

The American Express Co. travelers' checks were worthless anywhere, as far as getting marks was concerned. Business houses were limited to draw from the bank 33,000 marks per day and in that amount three 10,000-mark notes must be taken, which were hard to get cashed, many restaurants having printed on the menu that they would not change them. Business men in Germany are working under the severest handicaps possible. They have no idea from one day to another what their raw material will cost—paper for making artificial flowers went up 200 per cent in one day—what their labor will cost, as a committee of workmen may get together at noon and demand an advance starting next morning, or what their finished product will be worth.

Open Prices Prevail.

All business done in that country today is on open prices; that is, the price is not mentioned in any definite figures, but the order is billed on day of delivery at whatever price the manufacturer thinks is right. If the buyer thinks he is "soaked," he can take it to court, and the judge will decide whether the price was out of reason or not. The greatest need of Germany today is foreign colonies where the home country could buy raw material for marks. Also, Germany is so thickly populated that it is impossible to grow foodstuffs enough for the people, and the surplus population has no place to which to emigrate and still be Germans.

Prices of merchandise at wholesale were such that the foreigner could buy when I first entered the country, but they kept rising so much while I was there that by the time I came away many things were so high that they could be bought cheaper at home; ninety per cent of all articles manufactured in Germany outside of necessities go to foreigners and the mills were working overtime on these orders when I was there, but, as prices are getting too high to purchase, these orders will soon cease, and then look out for the revolution.

Many of the best business men are praying that the Allies will take charge of things in Berlin and run the country with an iron hand until stability sets in.

and fourth-class and all coaches are divided into compartments holding six people, similar to the smoker on the Pullman. In the Rhine valley I once got into an empty compartment, which seemed strange, as travel is so heavy that people are always standing, but at the next station I was hustled out pretty lively, as the French military reserve a compartment on every Rhine train and I happened to get in on this train. Another time a friend and I were fined 20 marks right on the spot for smoking, or about 2 cents. The diners are crowded all day long and one must get a place card entitling him to sit at the table at a certain time. Waiting rooms consist only of small tables, where the people sit to eat and drink. I had an amusing experience in going from Stuttgart to Frankfurt. I purchased a second-class ticket, but, finding no seat, went into the first-class section and told the conductor I would pay the difference. In the meantime the train changed conductors and when the new one came around to collect, my traveling companion, a Hollander, told him the previous conductor told me I could sit there for no extra charge. The Hollander then told me to give the conductor a 10-mark tip, 2 cents, which I did; this fixed everything up. "You can't beat the Dutch!"

A majority of the Germans do not know we enforce prohibition in America, and seem to think it is an impossible thing, as to them beer and wine are as common as water and coffee to us. I know that many did not believe me.

Getting private purchases out of Germany is hard. My Hamburg hotel man said he could get my trunk past the customs officers for 2,000 marks. I told him to go ahead, but that night he said the customs officers were new and would not pass a few sample artificial flowers, a toy moving picture machine I was bringing home to the children and some laces for which I had an export permit, but which the officers said was defective. I told the hotel clerk I would attend to it myself at the pier next day as I sailed. I knew the machine did not need an export permit and I was ready to throw the flower samples away, but the hotel man gave me all kinds of arguments to allow one of his men to get the things past customs, and I agreed, but all together it cost me 5,000 marks in graft. Peculiarly enough, the moving picture films and artificial flower samples were the only things that

A gold-letter man I visited flew into a rage when he heard I was an American wanting to buy gold letters. He said two other American firms had cheated him during the war and he would starve before he would deal with an American again. I happened to visit the kaiser's old home at Potsdam the Sunday following his betrothal announcement, and thousands of people visited the kaiserin's tomb, carrying flowers, as a protest against the coming marriage, of which almost everyone highly disapproved.

CLEVELAND, O.

The Market.

Last week stock was scarce, although the demand was not large. The few mums now arriving are of the large types and most of them are Bonnaillon, Rager and Chieftain. Prices have advanced slightly. The supply of pompons also has decreased, although the demand has not been heavy enough to warrant any rise in the prices. Some exceptionally fine stock is arriving, yellow being the predominating color. Each day has found the mums and pompons fairly well cleaned up. Roses have not increased in quantity. If anything, they are decreased, with the exception of White Killarney. Pink roses, such as Columbia and Premier, are extremely scarce, it being almost impossible to supply them after 8:30 a. m., as they are picked up quickly. The quality of these is improving daily. Ophelia also has been in the same class, as there have not been enough to go around. Carnations are coming in more plentifully, but the quality is not improved, nor has the price advanced. The demand for carnations has been extremely light, owing, no doubt, to the abundance of mums on the market. Some fairly good Laddies are now arriving, but only in limited quantities. Violets are not arriving regularly and the demand for them is light. Easter lilies have been scarce, while the few that are arriving are cleaning up at good prices. Japanese lilies continue to help out considerably for funeral work, the short-stemmed stock selling much more readily than the opposite grades. There is a call for valley only occasionally, the demand being anything but steady. Orchids are exceptionally scarce and the price is high. Calendulas and bachelor's buttons are arriving from outdoors and have been moving slowly, but have been cleaning up fairly well, although the price is low. Asparagus plumosus has been cleaning up well, but A. Sprengeri has been hard to move.

Buy Another Book Today

Many of the most successful business men in the trade had little schooling—but they practically all are readers—they read The Review each week and they buy books frequently. Such men are self-educated—theirs is knowledge gleaned by reading.

It is the mission of The Review to assist its subscribers in every way to improve their knowledge of the trade and their knowledge in other fields of human interest. As a measure of co-operation The Review has added to its services to subscribers a book purchasing service. This department, of course, specializes on books pertaining to the business of florists, nurserymen and seedsmen, but in addition will secure for subscribers, without charge for its service, any book they want, of any nature.

If you want a book of any given title, The Review will get it for you. Or if you want a book on any certain subject, The Review will send you the titles, with prices, of all the books on that subject.

Look over the list in the appended coupon. Most of these are standard books by well known authors. Order the one which seems, from its title, most nearly to concern your special interests. When you have read it carefully, order another.

Put a cross opposite the books you want. Clip the coupon and send it to us with a check to cover cost. Books will be forwarded, postpaid, without delay.

Seed Trade NewsAMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Alexander Forbes, Newark, N. J.;
Secretary, O. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

G. OVERDUIN will again represent Tromp Bros., Lisse, Holland, in this country this season.

THE Crescent Seed Farm, of Spencerport, N. Y., has built a cold storage and drying house. This is a 2-story structure, about 60x120.

O. M. MORRIS and M. C. SNOW have sold their interests in the Morris & Snow Seed Co., Los Angeles, Cal., and D. F. Reichert is now the proprietor.

VISITED St. Paul: J. K. Rugowski, president of the J. K. Rugowski Seed Co., Manitowoc, Wis. On his way home he stopped at Warsaw, Wis., to visit his first grandchild, a vigorous boy who arrived November 3.

HARRY BUCKMAN, manager of the seed farms of W. Atlee Burpee Co., Lompoc, Cal., was in Chicago last week, on his way back to California with the new Mrs. Buckman. He stopped at George J. Ball's, at Glen Ellyn, November 24.

A MEETING of the New England Seed Trade Association will be held at the Parker House December 5. Luncheon will be served at noon. Alexander Forbes, Newark, N. J., president of the American Seed Trade Association, will be present to speak, as will Dr. Gilbert, state commissioner of agriculture.

GARDEN seed arrived at New York harbor on the steamer Binnendyk, from Rotterdam, November 23, consigned as follows: American Shipping Co., eight bags; Peter Henderson & Co., 108 bags; International Forwarding Co., 113 bags; Vaughan's Seed Store, sixty-four bags; American Express Co., twenty bags.

THE bottom price for next year's crop of French Paper Whites seems to have been fixed by the action of certain Holland houses, which are booking orders in America on the basis of no shipment if the price exceeds a certain figure. The French won't let the price go below what they will know the dealers can afford to pay.

CAREFUL investigation west shows that seeds are not in overabundance, with some varieties short. Parsnips are exceedingly short and practically all varieties of beans are short. This shortage applies not only in this country, but also in other countries; there probably will be enough to take care of the market of the middle west. The shortage will be felt most keenly in HOLLAND BULB SEASON.

The effect of this year's weather in Holland on bulb production and on bulb prices is told by Tromp Bros., Lisse, Holland, in their review of the season, which reads as follows:

"The past season has been rather exceptional and not favorable for bulb culture in general. The winter 1921-22 was a pretty severe one for Holland, so that bulbs which had not been handled with the required care and precaution suffered badly from frost. A cold and dry spring followed, with the exception of a few hot days. The summer was much the same. Then, when lifting time drew near, the weather turned wet and remained so all through the lifting, drying and shipping periods.

"Hyacinths withstood the weather better than any other bulbs and turned out to be up to the usual standard. The lifting of hyacinths for preparation, for which a greater quantity than ever before was required, opened the bulb season at an early date and had a stiffening effect upon prices, which put a stamp of liveliness on the market for the whole season. They maintained their prices well up to the end and cleared out well, notwithstanding the fact that the eastern countries did not buy anything worth mentioning.

"Early tulips did not turn out so well as hyacinths, the crops bearing too much the traces of an unfavorable growing season. Quantity, as well as quality, was below the normal standard, which caused the market to rise quantities, they joined the other tulips in realizing high prices, on account of the much increased demand with which this class of tulips was favored. They kept the higher prices well up to the end of the season, only Clara Butt and Pride of Haarlem becoming a little easier.

"Daffodils and Narcissus poetaz, not less than early tulips, suffered badly, and a shortage soon became evident. Prices went up considerably, especially for Golden Spur, Bicolor Victoria and Emperor, with only Double von Sion on the decline. The first-size bulbs, when sold out, were followed by the second-size bulbs, which soon realized the same quotations."

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

Juffermans & Co., Sassenheim, Holland.—Wholesale list of hyacinths, tulips, narcissi and crocuses, with prices per hundred and per thousand. "New and rare varieties are our specialties," says the firm.

Thos. J. Murphy Nurseries, Painesville, O.—A wholesale list of hardy plants, with prices per hundred and an invitation to ask for "special quotations on large quantities"; a neat booklet, printed on cream-tinted paper.

McCallum Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.—An illustrated folder, presenting "timely opportunities to save on Christmas supplies." Many of the staple, reasonable requisites, plainly useful or highly ornamental, are listed, with some, also, of the McCallum specialties.

Frank Koehler, Camden, N. J.—"Choice Irises and Other Hardy Perennials," a 4-page list, with a finely colored, full-page picture of Mr. Koehler's three new seedling irises, one of which, he says, is "the nearest approach to red in the iris family." A new pink seedling phlox also is offered.

Fruitvale Dahlia Farm, Oakland, Cal.—A well printed catalogue of dahlias, with two halftone pictures of "new California decorative" varieties; eight pages, in a tan-colored cover. Varieties of California origin, which form a large proportion of the stock, are designated by an asterisk, prefixed to the name.

Sluis & Groot, Enkhuizen, Holland.—A clearly printed 92-page catalogue of flower seeds. The descriptions are as concise as possible and all the varieties are arranged in strictly alphabetical order. A comprehensive stock is offered, especially in antirrhinums, asters, nasturtiums, pansies, sweet peas and other staple items.

Huntington Beach Nurseries, Huntington Beach, Cal.—A 16-page "field list" of dahlias, without illustrations. The entire stock, with the exception of ten brand-new varieties, is arranged in one continuous alphabetical list, with an abbreviation after each varietal name to indicate the type or class. The ten new sorts, originated by the proprietor, Joseph Vavra, and offered for delivery in the spring of 1923, appear in the last part of the catalogue.

Alessandro Squadrilli, Naples, Italy.—Illustrated wholesale catalogue of vegetable and flower seeds; forty-eight large, compactly printed pages and cover. This is a notably cosmopolitan sort of catalogue. Though it is issued by an Italian seedsman, it is not printed in Italian, but in three other languages—English, German and French. The prices are quoted in French francs.

Little Tree Farms, Boston, Mass.—Two exceptionally handsome folders, excellently printed. The numerous illustrations are not only pretty and helpful, but are most artistically arranged. The reading matter, also, is well written and persuasive. "Bulletin Sixteen" is printed in tints of lavender, with orange-colored decorations; it contains offers of nursery stock for fall planting and is conspicuously inscribed with the motto, "This autumn, gain six months." "Bulletin Seventeen" is entitled "When Winter Comes; a Little Letter on Home Decoration for the Winter Months"; it is printed in a pastel shade of green, with blue bordering, and gives prominence to evergreens for all sorts of winter purposes, especially in window boxes, tubs and vases.

All these varieties are the Winter-Flowering Spencer types and can be grown indoors or outdoors the year around. They will produce more and better flowers outdoors than the old late Spencers, because they bloom 3 to 4 weeks earlier, before the hot weather sets in. Plant after the Chrysanthemum and get a full crop for Easter. Plant in cool frames or outdoors just before the freezing begins and get a full crop in May for Decoration Day. Plant out of doors in the spring and they will bloom early in June.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

AUGUSTINE & Co., Normal, Ill., are building a greenhouse to assist in the further enlargement of their business.

THE Belford Nurseries, Oradell, N. J., have been incorporated with a capital stock of $125,000. The incorporators are H. J. Ware and Leah J. Ware, Oradell, and William Good, Westwood, N. J.

AN account of the death of George A. Harrison, a member of the firm of J. J. Harrison & Sons, conducting Harrison's Nurseries, Berlin, Md., which occurred November 18, will be found on the obituary page of this issue.

ONE of the most helpful catalogues to the untutored amateur planter is that of Reasoner Bros., Oneco, Fla., called "The Tropical Grounds Book and Catalogue." The advice and suggestions given in connection with its offers is arranged so as to be of greatest assistance to the retail buyer.

At the thirty-ninth annual meeting of the American Pomological Society, at Council Bluffs, November 18, the following officers were reelected for 1923: President, L. H. Bailey, Ithaca, N. Y.; first vice-president, Paul C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; second vice-president, W. T. Macoun, Ottawa, Ont.; secretary, R. B. Cruickshank, Columbus, O. On the executive committee are J. C. Blair, Urbana, Ill.; Frederic Crane, Madison, Wis.; F. P. Downing, South Bend, Ind.; W. W. Farnsworth, Waterville, O.; H. H. Hardie, Hudson, Mich.; H. H. Hume, Glen St. Mary, Fla.; C. I. TREE PLANTING SPREADS.

The "Plan to Plant Another Tree" movement has now gained such widespread attention that individual towns, under the direction of various clubs in them, are taking to heart what the Illinois State Nurserymen's Association has had to say on the subject. On Arbor day, December 1, this year, Concord, Ga., is planning to plant trees, under the leadership of the Woman's Club. This town is the first city in the United States to take up the program and it deserves a great deal of credit for its willingness to do its part in the promoting of a plan which will be of benefit to the country at large.

To give some idea of what this progressive Woman's Club is doing in Concord, Ga., the following is a portion of the letter written by Mrs. C. T. Smith, of Concord, Ga., to J. A. Young, secretary of the Illinois State Nurserymen's Association:

We want to thank you again for the plan of planting you gave us for Arbor day. It was excellent. We made a house to house canvass and have every family in town and many outsiders lined up for the biggest planting any town ever had.

We are specializing on ornamentals this year and intend to carry out three years of planting. This year it is ornamentals; next year it will be shade trees and the year after that everybody will be so enthused over how pretty it all looks that there will be no danger of their quitting the planting. The more one plants the more one wants to plant. All the churches and schools are planting out trees and evergreens.

Mrs. C. T. Smith, wife of the president of the Concord Nurseries, Concord, Ga., states that the members of the Concord Woman's Club made a house-to-house canvass in order to see to it that more trees were planted. The nurseries of that city joined in the movement and put on "bargain sales" for Arbor day. Public-spirited citizens said that no one should be deprived of a chance to participate in the movement on account of a lack of trees, and gave trees to all those who were unable to buy them. Landlords gave their tenants trees, and schools and churches were also remembered. Due to the efforts of the Woman's Club, there is not a home in Concord, Ga., around which there are not some new trees planted.

It is the opinion of Mrs. Smith that if the woman's clubs all over the country could be interested in this work it will mean a more beautiful and more fruitful country, and the nursery industry will reap the benefit of the work, as will the country at large.

Horticulture Classified.

Horticulture is less advertised, less talked about and less known about than any other industry. It is my belief that combined horticulture has more capital, more workers, and does annually a greater business than any other one endeavor in America. We cannot separate commercial horticulture from any other division of horticulture. The florists, nurserymen, seedsmen, landscape gardeners and tree dealers, combined with the hundreds of thousands of tree, shrub and flower planters, make up our American horticultural army, and without any division or cliques. Commercial horticulture consists of 25,000 florists, 8,000 seedsmen, 4,000 nurserymen, 2,500 landscape gardeners and 10,000 tree dealers.

The combined wealth of these firms is, we believe, greater than the invested capital of any other commercial industry. This does not take into consideration the thousands of orchardists or fruit growers, whose invested capital in land, trees and equipment exceeds the commercial organizations listed above. The help employed in all these industries, including the orchardists or commercial fruit growers, will, we believe, far exceed the help employed by all the railroads combined, the steel trust, the Standard Oil Co., or any other industry, unless it may be in the manufacture of automobiles and trucks. America is less active and less interested in this great combined industry than she is in almost any other of her activities. Who is to blame for this? The nurserymen, florists, seedsmen, landscape gardeners and tree dealers have failed in their part for lack of organization and coöperation. In order to create a tree planting habit, it is essential that horticulture be advertised. The potential advertising strength of the industries listed above is, we believe, between two and three million dollars per annum. Less than one-fourth of this, even $100,000 to $150,000, if properly used in national magazines and the daily papers, will awaken an interest in tree planting, and will stimulate a tree planting habit in all parts of America.

The advertising, however, will not produce the best results without the cooperation and support of chambers of commerce, civic clubs, including the women's clubs, farm bureaus and farmers' clubs. This sort of activity appeals to them; it is just what they want to do. Hundreds of such clubs are already working with "Plan to Plant Another Tree."

Thousands of dollars are spent annually for trees and other plant material, and wasted because of a lack of knowledge of how to plant and care after planting. Professor L. H. Bailey says that but three per cent of the fruit trees planted in America ever come to a bearing age. The statistics recently gathered from the state of Missouri indicated that in the last decade sixty-four per cent of the apple trees of that state have been lost. This is true of most of the states in the union, although perhaps in not so large a percentage. The United States government census says that 53,000 acres of small fruit trees have disappeared in the last ten years, principally strawberries. Forestry experts tell us that unless more forest trees are planted, within twenty-five years America will feel the pinch of much higher prices and curtailment of the use of lumber. These are serious truths.

Recognize Responsibility.

What does this mean? It means that commercial horticultural societies such as yours are failing to do their duty. You are drawing a certain amount of the taxpayers' money annually to help sustain your organization. What are you doing to increase plantings and to teach the people of this state how to care for the materials which they plant? It is a crime against horticulture that this should continue, and I challenge you now to put yourselves on record during the coming year to arouse the sleeping giant of horticulture and unite with every organized effort to make America not only the garden of the world but the greatest fruit producing nation on earth. You say this will hurt your business as an orchardist. There are 110,000,000 people in America and each person ought normally to consume three bushels of apples per year, with a corresponding amount of other fruits at the proper season. They are not doing this and why? Because you men who produce the fruits in your commercial orchards have not gotten together and taught our American people how to eat fruit. A few thousand dollars per year put into national advertising, a few letters written to interested organizations will cause the people of this country to use ten times as much fruit as they are now using. This is not a question of "Let George do it"—it is up to each individual member to see that some sort of organization is made in order to encourage the consumption of more fruit. The fruit grower may benefit, but the greatest benefit will come in health and happiness to those who consume the fruit which you are so anxious to sell. Should the right kind of program be carried out, it will take hundreds of thousands of new trees to supply the demand.

Plan to Plant.

Do not forget, either, that when folks begin to plant fruit trees and to think about the beauty produced with shrubs and flowers, they will naturally be more interested in the work which you "Plan to Plant Another Tree" has had a phenomenal growth. It began in a small way and was organized to teach the people of the state of Illinois how to take care of their trees after planting. It has now spread to practically every state in the Union. It is financed by memberships of from $3 per year to as much as one feels that he can afford. INTERESTING IF TRUE.

The daily papers carried the following "story" November 22, under a Three Rivers, Mich., date line:

"Fifty thousand dollars was the price paid today by Frank E. Beatty, president of the R. M. Kellogg Co., of this city, for a single strawberry plant. This is probably the highest price ever paid for any single variety of that fruit. The plant is to be known as Rockhill, America's Greatest Everbearer, being named in honor of the breeder, Harlow Rockhill, of Conrad, Iowa.

"Mr. Beatty said that the price paid was not because he expected to make a profit from sales of the plant, but as an incentive to growers and breeders of plants to develop new varieties. This particular variety bears in the early summer exactly the same as the ordinary strawberry, but during the late summer again begins bearing and continues until frost stops the growth of the fruit.

"Mr. Beatty, who is a nationally known expert on strawberry culture, believes that the new variety will practically revolutionize the strawberry industry."

H. F. Littlefield reports having had a brisk demand for wedding work. A large number of customers are always seen in this store, and the workroom is generally filled with many boxes of flowers waiting for delivery.

The Randall Flower Shop is a place of much activity these days. The chief and his staff are seen busily engaged.

The Worcester County Horticultural Society has already mailed checks to the exhibitors at the recent show. There were hundreds of premium winners during the season of 1922. The annual meeting of this society will be held in December, for the purpose of electing the new officers and making the appropriations for the season of 1923.

A large goldfish pool is seen in the window of H. F. A. Lange's store, which attracts many customers. E. A.

Greenhouse Heating

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

REARRANGING SYSTEM.

I should like to know the required steam radiation for the following houses: One house, 30x200 feet; one house, 28x200 feet; two houses, 20x75 feet; two houses, 12x75 feet. In the first house there are four flows and four returns of 2-inch pipe; in the second house there are the same number of flows and returns; the third house contains three flows and three returns; the fourth also contains three flows and three returns. The side walls contain three feet of wood and about two and one-half feet of glass. The temperature here goes to 10 degrees below zero. What arrangement of the piping would you suggest? C. T. H.—Ill.

The temperatures desired in the different houses are not stated, and hence it is impossible to state definitely whether or not the present radiation is sufficient to provide the heat needed for the houses.

It is preferable to use 1½-inch pipe for the return coils in houses from fifty to 200 feet in length, but if the radiation mentioned above is properly installed and the boiler is of ample size, there should be no difficulty in securing a temperature of 60 degrees in ordinary winter weather.

When the temperature outside drops to 10 degrees below zero and only ordinary attention is given to the firing, we would expect that the temperature would drop to about 52 degrees in the 30-foot house and to 55 degrees in the 28-foot house. In the 20-foot houses it would be from 58 to 60 degrees and about 63 to 65 degrees in the 12-foot houses. With a good draft and frequent attention to the firing, it is probable that 60 degrees can be maintained in any of the houses when it is 10 degrees below zero outside.

The sketch shows the 200-foot houses to be built side by side. The boiler house is opposite the middle of the 28-foot house and the narrow houses are built against the sides of the boiler house and parallel with the 200-foot houses.

If changes in the present radiation are to be made, it would be well to use two 2-inch flow pipes, running in either direction from the center of each of the wider houses. They could be carried on purlin posts, or suspended from the purlins. Each of these flow pipes should be used to feed coils of 1½-inch pipes running from the ends back to the centers of the houses. For 60 degrees the following is the number of return pipes required in the houses: There should be eleven in the 30-foot house and ten in the house twenty-eight feet wide. For 50 degrees use nine and

The Quickest Water Heater in the World

The Kroeschell Boiler heats quicker, gives more heat and uses less fuel than any other boiler.

The efficiency and economy of Kroeschell Boilers can in no way be better proved than in the following statements of three big men of the greenhouse trade.

Charles Totty

"The Kroeschell Boiler I installed last year usually runs from 10 p. m. to 6 a. m. without attention. I do not have the least trouble to keep temperatures in the coldest weather. The boiler has given entire satisfaction. The Kroeschell is the best boiler we have ever handled."

Frank Oechslein

"I have used Kroeschell Boilers ever since I built my first greenhouse. They have always given me the very best satisfaction and I believe them as good boilers as money can buy."

Chas. McCauley

"In speaking of the Kroeschell Boiler as an economical greenhouse boiler I cannot say too much. Personally I have had the pleasure or misfortune to fire nearly every make of greenhouse boiler on the market and I can safely say the Kroeschell is the best of them all."

eight returns, respectively, in these houses. These may be arranged in four coils in each end of each house.

For the other houses only one 2-inch flow pipe will be required. This should be about four feet under the ridge, and the coils of return pipes should run to the end of the houses nearest the boiler. The 20-foot houses will require eight returns for 60 degrees and six returns for 50 degrees. In the 12-foot houses use six returns for 60 degrees and four returns for 50 degrees. In each of these houses there should be three coils.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

The weather continues warm, and outdoor flowers are more plentiful every day. One can see parkinsonias, Banksia roses, camellias, sweet olives and oleanders flowering freely, as well as other spring-blooming plants. The poinsettias are beginning to look exceedingly showy. It is a common sight to see a plant with forty or fifty bracts to the plant, each measuring a foot or more in diameter and the plant twelve to fifteen feet across and the same in height. These are seen growing in almost every garden. Another attractive plant seen in a great many gardens is a small-flowered, free-blooming crimson abutilon. Clerodendron Balfourii does well outside here, also the poincianas, which flower all summer and until late in the autumn.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society held a special meeting Thursday, November 16, to determine whether or not a way out of the threatened federal quarantine of Louisiana and Mississippi could be found. After a discussion of the question, the members present selected Mr. Barber, who until recently was in charge of the government sugar experimental station here, to represent the New Orleans florists before the federal horticultural board, at Washington. If the quarantine is enforced, it will be a great hardship to many of the florists here. Some of them ship practically their whole output north, especially the growers of ficus, dracaenas, crotons, aspidistras and palms.

CINCINNATI, O.

The Market.

Conditions in this market last week were better than the week previous. Mums are now arriving in smaller quantities than they were. The varieties most in evidence are Chadwick, Seidewitz, Turner and Lynnwood Hall. Roses are finding a better market, as the mum season is waning. Roses have never been better. The most abundant are Premier, followed closely by Madame Butterfly and Columbia.

Sweet peas are arriving in increased quantities, because of the bright weather, and they clean up readily. Carnations are somewhat scarce.

Green goods find a good market.

Various Notes.

Julius Baer reports that debutante business this year has far surpassed that of previous years; funeral orders with him are many.

Ray Murphy has been home ill with the grip. He is improving finely.

The establishment of H. W. Sheppard has been the scene of some beautiful and novel wedding decorations. There is an unusual call for strawflower baskets.

William Gardner, of the P. J. Olinger range, at Newcastle, Ind., is shipping some good pompons and some large Seidewitz mums.

C. E. Critchell, who has been under the doctor's care for some time, has shown signs of improvement the last few days.

Paul Klingsporn, of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, Chicago, was in the city for a short business visit last week.

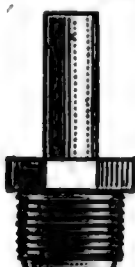

Other visitors last week were I. Rosnosky, of the American Bulb Co., Chicago; Charles C. Leedle, Springfield, O.; Joseph Marks, of A. Henderson & Co., Chicago, and C. P. Brunner, Springfield, O.

The Market.

The arrival of frost has put an end to outdoor stock. This condition pleases the trade, as there was so much of such stock on the market as to be a detriment to sales in the greenhouse stock. Roses and carnations are excellent and mums are fine. Mums are about gone, with the exception of pompons and the late varieties.

Various Notes.

T. D. Kuebler has leased his greenhouses to his two sons, Arthur and Theodore, who will grow much of the stock for his store. Theodore, who has been in the employ of Baur-Steinkamp & Co. for several years, has returned here and with Arthur has taken charge of the greenhouses. Mr. Kuebler, Sr., has been forced to give up the management of the greenhouses on account of his ill health. He has moved into rooms above his store and will give his entire time to his retail business.

Karl Zeidler has let a contract to the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., Chicago, for the erection of two modern greenhouses, 40x200 feet. The material is on the way here, and as soon as it arrives, work will begin. The houses will be planted to lettuce as soon as they are completed, and next summer they will be planted to carnations and roses.

The Lockyear Floral Co. reports a good business at its range. The demand for mums has been especially brisk. Early and mid-season stock is gone. The stock of roses and carnations of the firm is in fine shape, as is its other stock.

Louis Kleidts, of the Lockyear Floral Co., was a visitor in St. Louis during the flower show.

There was no decrease in business last week for Mrs. Elsperrmann. She has had a continuous demand for stock, especially for mums, but there are not many of these left.

At the Niednagel range everything is in readiness for the winter. The new houses which the firm erected recently are filled with stock, chiefly carnations, and these are in fine condition. There are bright prospects for a good supply of stock here for Christmas. The big boiler from the old range is ready to be fired and will be put into operation when needed.

The Blackman Floral Co. is so busy at the store that the flowers in the greenhouses do not have a chance to open in the manner that they should before they are taken to the store.

Royston & Fenton are stocking up with mums, and expect to have cuttings to offer soon.

King GREENHOUSES

AND MR. GOULD BOUGHT ANOTHER "KING"

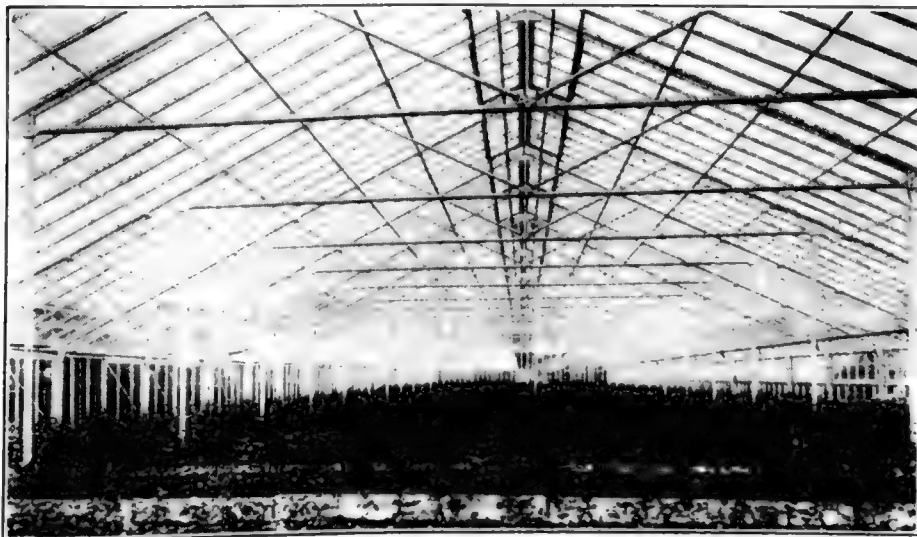

J. H. Gould, wholesale florist of Middleport, N. Y., was so well pleased with his six King greenhouses that last spring he placed his order for the seventh — a steel frame, flat rafter, 52 by 200-foot house.

This house is producing a crop of roses that would gladden the heart of any florist, besides swelling his pocket book. Mr. Gould says: "After comparing all propositions in regard to workmanship, service, details of construction and price, we were firmly convinced that your proposition was the best we had received and so placed the order with you. We gladly recommend your construction and your company to any florist."

Bulletin No. 51A will tell you about the steel framer.

The Market.

The past week has seen a great change in weather conditions here, which naturally was welcomed by the florists. The heavy frosts have entirely cut off the supply of outdoor flowers and have given the zest to business that we usually expect as soon as colder weather arrives.

With Thanksgiving in sight, the supply of chrysanthemums is already beginning to wane. It looks as though there might develop a shortage by that time. Quality has been exceptionally good this year, the weather being quite favorable. This has been especially true of plants grown in the open and in coldframes. Never before have we seen so many really good chrysanthemums in Nashville that never saw the inside of a greenhouse.

Carnations are developing in quality rapidly. Since the arrival of cooler weather, the cut is also increasing from day to day.

Roses remain in plentiful numbers and are increasing in supply, but yet there is no thought of any surplus.

Various Notes.

The flower show held in connection with the convention of the Tennessee State Florists' Association has already proved its worth to the trade. Many people took copious notes at the show and have been making inquiries and placing orders for next spring's delivery. Clearly, the trade will see to it that we have more flower shows in Nashville in the future. Another good result of the convention and flower show is that the florists of Nashville have been able to get closer together than ever before.

With the unusual building campaign on in the city, the demand for bulbs has been exceedingly heavy. The same can be said of evergreens and hardy shrubbery. Shortages are already developing in these lines.

The general business condition here seems to be improving right along. While the expense of growing is perhaps greater than formerly, all feel well pleased with the outlook. F. B.

Orlando, Fla.—It is the intention of M. Arthur, 208 Hillman street, to enter the trade as soon as he can find a proposition suitable. Mr. Arthur was formerly a member of the trade, but has been out for some time.

MEMPHIS, TENN.

Business has been good for the last ten days. The great number of weddings at this season have assisted greatly, and funerals have also done their part to increase business. A large number of designs were called for on account of the funeral of General Luke M. Wright. All of the florists had a share in this work. There were a large number of telegraph orders also.

Dahlias have been blooming continually, as the weather has been ideal for them. All of the outdoor stock has been killed, however.

The municipal greenhouses are getting ready with cuttings for the spring. About twice as many cuttings will be required here next year, as the greenhouses have taken over the fair grounds and the swimming pool, which must be decorated and planted with ornamental and flowering plants.

The Buntyn Floral Co. has had a fine lot of mums. Some of the greenhouses here contain some fancy carnations. Some good cyclamen stock is seen here also.

C. L. B.

NEWARK, N. J.

Preparations for Christmas are being made by the local florists. Holiday novelties of many kinds are being made up or purchased. It is still too early to place orders for flowers or plants with the wholesale houses, but such orders will be sent in soon. Business is fairly good now. Funeral work is in brisk demand, but the number of social events is increasing steadily. Wedding work and transient trade are fair.

William Moore, 40 years old, a landscape gardener, of Farmwood, was killed as he alighted from a New York train and stepped in front of a Philadelphia train, which followed closely in the wake of the New York train on an adjacent track. Mr. Moore is survived by his widow and two small children.

CAMPANULAS FOR IMMEDIATE SHIPMENT.

Our forcing grade.

HOW TO FORCE THEM.

As soon as received, pot them and carry the plants after that into a frame; they are better off if they do not freeze, they don't appreciate it. Up to February they want anything but a warm house; leave all the foliage on you can; hold the house as near to 32 deg. as possible and also after that time don't subject them to a high temperature; lift the plants and heel in a coldhouse to be planted out in a solid bed in February, to be slowly forced into bloom for cut-flowers for late April and during May.

Campanula Medium, blue, rose and white;
Campanula Calycanthema, blue, rose, white;

GLADIOLI

POMMERT'S "PURITY."

This is the new commercial white that created a sensation at the Washington, D. C., convention of the S. A. F., was given a first class certificate and was presented to President Harding by the ladies of the S. A. F. with an appropriate speech dedicating it to the memory of his mother.

It is a pure white when cut in bud and opened in water; flower is size and form of America but has more substance making it the best shipper and keeper we have ever grown.

Strong healthy grower in the field and greenhouse; an ideal forcing variety but two weeks later than Lilywhite; an all season kind. You will have to have it eventually—Why not now? The best money-maker of all in the cut flower market. Be sure to get the right one "Pom-mert's." Our soil produces the best bulbs to be had.

GLADIOLUS BULBS.

FOR INDOOR CULTURE.

Ninety per cent of the success in forcing Gladioli is, we believe, due to planting bulbs that have been especially cured for that purpose, and not such as have been cultivated during the summer season for cut flower production. We have specialized in forcing Gladioli for several years and our properly arranged curing rooms now contain immense quantities of the varieties most desirable for the above named purpose, particularly, Maiden's Blush, 1910 Rose, Wilbrink, Francis King, America, Halley, Mrs. Frank Pendleton, Chicago White, etc. Complete price list mailed for the asking.

We Recommend This Book To All Retail Growers

You may think it strange that as greenhouse-builders we should give up this entire page to recommending a book instead of showing and talking about our greenhouses.

It would have been strange a few years ago. But the up-to-date business man today realizes that anything that improves in general the business he is in, will improve his business. That's why we recommend this book of Fritz Bahr's to every retail grower, new or old.

It's the first book of its kind that has anywhere near covered the subject as thoroughly. It's none of the usual tale-telling kind that is brimming full and running over with the brags of what I did and the fatherly advice of what you ought to do. Not a word of that kind of uselessness.

Like the "Week's Work" department in The Exchange that Fritz Bahr conducted so ably for over twelve years, "Commercial Floriculture" is based upon his practical and successful experience. But, in addition, the material has been so arranged, indexed, and edited as to provide in the most helpful and usable form more than 500 pages of "real meat" and nearly 300 excellent illustrations of the most valuable sort.

Take Chapter Two, for example—here's what it is about: "Indoors and Outdoors All the Year 'Round. Things to Be Done and Thought of by the Busy Man During Each Month of the Year."

And then just glance over Chapters 5, 6 and 7—"Side Line Possibilities for Retail Growers"—"Important Flower Days of the Year"—"All Kinds of Plant Materials for the Retail Grower."

And then, in the latter half of the volume, there are practical, cultural directions for more than five hundred of the most important kinds of plants raised by the grower and handled by the florist.

As for the cost of this book, it's a mere pittance in proportion to its real worth. For so little as $5, The Florists' Review or The Florists' Exchange will send it anywhere in the United States or Canada, delivery prepaid.

Holton and Hunkel Co. Builds 7 More Houses

When The Holton & Hunkel Company of Milwaukee planned to enlarge, they decided to handle the erection themselves. But the problem was—Who would furnish the material? There are AGMCO and others—but AGMCO received the order. Why? Because the price was fair and the material was of very high quality.

How about you? Do you need to enlarge?

First of all, AGMCO treats you square. Second, AGMCO plans and methods will open your eyes. Third, Material and Workmanship is guaranteed. That means our reputation is in back of it. And last, you will find the price is very low when you consider quality.
